Civitan Club hopes to bring in $10,000 for area handicapped

By James D. Barr

Staff Writer

"For a small club, we certainly do very well."

Those are the sentiments of Walter Andersen, Virginia Beach Civitan Club member and the lieutenant governor of the Chesapeake District of Civitan International. His 18 years of experience with the club has made him aware of how much the 26 members of the Virginia Beach Civitan Club are able to do.

Their latest endeavor is to sponsor a special production of "Alice in Wonderland" by the Traveling Playhouse, a children's theater group made up of actors from the University of South Carolina that seek to bring entertainment to younger audiences.

The Civitan Club contacts local residents and businesses about helping to fund the cost of the production. Not only are local children, especially those with handicaps, able to take part in the event, but any money raised above the program's cost is dispersed by the Civitan Club for their other projects.

The major project, according to Andersen, is the Triple C Lodge. Located in Chesapeake, it serves as a summer camp for mentally and physically handicapped children and adults.

Last year's fundraising production of "Tom Sawyer" raised over $5,000, said Andersen. This year's project condinator, Daniel O'Nan, said he "would like to clear $10,000." Other projects the Civitan Club supports are the local, state and national Special Olympics for the handicapped; the Respite Center, an after-school activity center providing a place for handicapped students to go if their parents work; and the Ocean House, a center located in the North End section of the city providing 24-hour supervision for handicapped adults to have a "vacation" that is not always available.

Patti Phelps, a Civitan Club member and supervisor of the Residential Respite and Community Education Services with the Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities Services for the City of Virginia Beach, said the club's efforts to "assist in whatever way possible the mentally and handicapped of the community" are very worthwhile.

Her professional involvement with the handicapped lets her see how civic organizations like the Civitan Club can be involved where there are needs.

Recently, she said, the club

Kelly Weatherly, an Urban 4-H Technician, is organizing a horse judging clinic for young people to learn the finer aspects of horse and competitive showing.

A horse is a horse Local kids to find clinic

By James Barr

Staff Writer

The Virginia Beach 4-H Program is organizing a horse judging clinic for area youth ages 9 to 19. Kelly Weatherly, an Urban 4-H Technician, said she hopes this will be an "ongoing clinic with new things at each meeting."

The clinic should not be confused with learning how to be a judge, said Weatherly, but it is "mainly to find out what judges are looking for" and "to let the kids know what a good horse looks like."

Weatherly came up with the idea after meeting quite a few kids who "love horses but they don't know a whole lot about them," she said.

To assist the kids, the clinics will feature movies, slides and special speakers.

"It will teach the kids all about the horse, the parts, what makes up a perfect horse," said Weatherly. "It will be an educational experience."

All of this will help when it comes to going to horse shows. Judges look at specific features and a horse's conformation, said Weatherly.

The shape of the head, the thickness of the neck, shape and straightness of the legs, the length of the body and its proportions, the shape of the rump and the overall appearance determine who gets the blue ribbon and who doesn't, she said.

Karen Mavroudis, a Kempsville resident who recently started a 4-H horse club because of her two daughter's involvement, said;

"It will teach the kids all about the horse, the parts, what makes a perfect horse. It will be an educational experience." — Kelly Weatherly, Urban 4-H Technician, on the new horse judging clinic 4-H will start.

"I think a clinic would be good. There are so many children in the area who own horses, who want to progress, but don't know what they're doing."

Her experience is that though a child may take riding lessons, there isn't enough time to teach all the finer aspects of horse showing.

"Especially with group lessons," said Mavroudis, "there is so much more to getting ready and going to a show than what lessons can teach. The basic instructor just doesn't have time."

Most importantly, said Mavroudis, is that learning the Consultants offer $10.4 million solution to intersection at Kempsville and Princess Anne

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

Consultants have recommended a $10.4 million solution for improving the Kempsville and Princess Anne Roads intersection.

The construction of an "urban interchange," a grade-separated spread-diamond interchange with a heavy through movement on Princess Anne Road passing over the intersection, they say, will reduce delays for motorists at the intersection to a level of "comfort and convenience."

Approximately 30 property owners, mostly merchants who would be affected by the construction and the land acquisition, recently crowded into the City Council conference room to hear the report by Wiley & Wood, consultants.

They will have the opportunity to express their opinions at a public hearing in the middle to later part of March, which is the next step in the intersection program.

Charles Barnes, transportation engineer with Wiley & Wood, labeled the intersection one of the worst single intersections in the city and the worst on Princess Anne Road.

Citizens will be able to express their opinions at a public hearing later this month.

The level of service at the intersection, now "F" on a scale of "A" to "F," is unacceptable, Barnes said.

The urban interchange will increase the level of service to "B" both now and by the year 2010.

At present the average peak hour delay is 72.3 seconds in the morning and 64.6 seconds in the evening. The urban interchange would reduce that delay to an average 12.3 seconds.

The consultants presented Council with three alternatives, two of which would provide a "B" level of service by the year 2010 and one which would increase the level of service to "E" for now, but would drop to "D" by the year 2004.

The urban interchange, the consultants said, will provide a good level of comfort and convenience for both present and future traffic volumes and will displace fewer businesses than another alternate which would provide approximately the same level of service.

At present Barnes said, 46,000 vehicles travel through the intersection during a typical weekday 12-hour period from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. The total traffic through the intersection during a 24-hour period is estimated to be approximately 60,000 vehicles per day.

An estimated 75,970 vehicles per day are projected through the intersection by the year 2010, a 27 percent increase. Approximately 29,000 vehicles or 38 percent represent through traffic on Princess Anne Road.

The lowest-rated alternate, which would cost a total $4.9 million ($3,160,000 for construction and $1,750,000 for right of way acquisition), would widen all four approaches to the intersection to five lanes providing two left turn storage lanes, two through movement lanes, and one right turn lane.

New Command Master Chief at NAS believes in being totally involved

By Annette Hall

Special To The Virginia Beach Star

Coming from the close confines of shipboard living, Aviation Boatswain's Mate Master Chief (ABCM) Conrad Sissell recently reported to NAS Oceana to take over duties as command master chief (CMC). Although relatively new to the program, Sissell is a 26-year Navy veteran who uses his overall experience to strengthen the knowledge gained in the past two years as USS America's command master chief.

As direct liaison between the enlisted community and the command, Sissell believes the program really works well when a command master chief is totally involved. "You have to be willing to stick your neck out (and) take the risk of being involved," says Sissell.

Sissell plans to be more than a hand-shaker. He will be looking around, noting areas that need improvement, and making recommendations. "It goes without saying," says Sissell of his commitment to personnel aboard the station, but he looks at other areas of involvement.

He expects his program to be "all encompassing" and to include areas of discipline, maintaining standards of conduct and pride in the Navy uniform.

"I'm pretty straight-forward, a straight-talker," says Sissell. "I deal with things on the spot. If I see someone doing something that is not in accordance with Navy regs, I will correct it."

During the past ten years Sissell has been on sea duty, with the exception of a tour of the staff of the Safety Center.

"I don't have (much) shore time experience, so I am going to be learning as much as I possibly can over the next few weeks," notes Sissell. "It's going to be quite different being on a shore station—things are so spread out."

He plans to learn the various areas of responsibility and the needs of the wings and tenant activities that come to the command for support.

"An open door policy is the only way to go," informs Sissell. "I encourage people to call and if I don't have anything immediately scheduled, I'll tell them to come on over."

However, Sissell rigidly enforces the chain of command. He expects that an individual's chain of command has already been approached and "given the opportunity to solve the problem before a person comes to this office."

Sissell explains, "My involvement should be with those people whose departments or divisions feel my advice is needed because they have overlooked something due to the closeness of their relationship."

People with problems tend to see the commanding master chief more than those without problems. "Whatever support I can give, and whoever I can give it to, that's what I believe in," he said.

Sissell is concerned that a problem is "at least addressed." He offers the guidance and advice necessary to resolve the matter, but is not "an easy way out" for those who do not want to do anything to help themselves.

"The commanding officer and the executive officer are the key

Alice in Wonderland

The Virginia Beach Civitan Club may only have 26 members, but what they do for the community is more than their numbers might show. As one chapter of the fifth largest civic organization in the country, these men and women take time from their busy schedules to organize events and activities to raise money to assist where they see needs.

This month all their efforts are focused on bringing the Traveling Playhouse production of "Alice in Wonderland" to Virginia Beach. They see two reasons for doing this and both are beneficial for the city.

First, this children's theater production brings a quality cultural activity in which young people may take part. An introduction of the wonders of live theater at an early age can make a positive impression that will last the rest of their lives. In a day where our youth have so many negative influences vying for their attention, having this option is a much needed resource.

Last year the Civitan Club was able to distribute almost 2,500 tickets to area groups for the production of "Tom Sawyer." Hundreds of children were able to take part in theater for the first time and thousands of dollars raised for charitable purposes. This year, with "Alice in Wonderland," they hope to do even better. But, they need your help.

Secondly, the funds generated by the event, by the support of private citizens and area businesses, make it possible for the Civitan Club to assist programs that need financial help.

Their gifts make it possible for other organizations and programs to buy much needed equipment or organize new activities.

Searchline serves the city

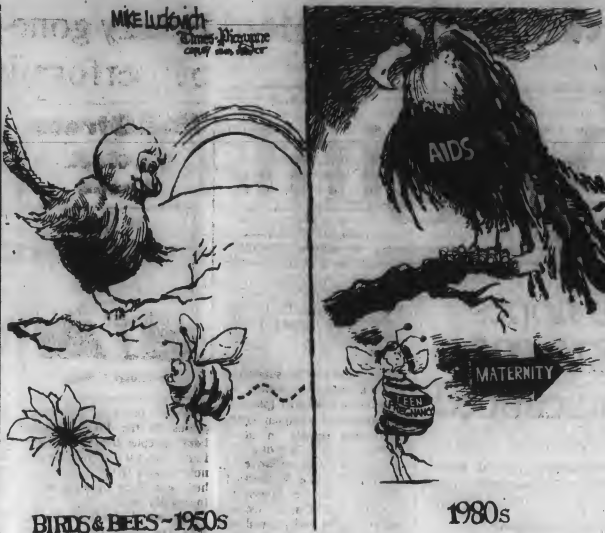

Thanks to the Mayor's Committee on Aging and the United Way of Hampton Roads, citizens of Virginia Beach now have Searchline, a confidential human services information and referral telephone number. If you have ever had a question you knew had an answer but you didn't know where to call, or if you couldn't find a service or program but you knew it existed, now you can call the Searchline at 427-0077 and get your questions answered.

The many departments of the city government provide many services for Virginia Beach citizens, all of which are paid for by tax dollars. The trouble is, if the people do not know how to get in contact with the right service, it goes unused when it is most needed.

The Searchline helps in two ways. People are put in contact with the right service, enabling them to get their questions answered. At the same time, everyone's tax dollars are put to better use.

The Searchline helps in two ways. People are put in contact with the right service, enabling them to get their questions answered. At the same time, everyone's tax dollars are put to better use.

This is the type of service that allows the city government to be more responsive to the needs of the people—and that is what the city government is supposed to do.—J.D.B.

PACE program for elderly still needed

Editor:
Although House Bill 1302, the Pharmaceutical Assistance Program for the Elderly or PACE Program, failed to pass the 1987 Session of the General Assembly, I will strive to make the public aware of the increasing need for this program. I will work to educate the population on the varied benefits of the PACE Program.

In Pennsylvania, a single individual who earns less than $12,000 a year or a married couple whose combined income is less than $15,000 a year can apply to the Department of Aging for a pharmaceutical card at the cost of $4 a month. This card allows the individual to receive all the prescription medication they need.

In addition to medication, this program also offers a prescription drug education program. This program would inform elderly citizens of the hazards of prescription drugs, encourage the elderly to question physicians and pharmacists concerning the effects of taking prescription drugs, and stress the importance of having detailed directions concerning correct dosage and the time period the drug should be taken.

Many times due to income levels, the elderly cannot qualify for Medicaid. Necessity for the PACE measure becomes evident when one understands that as people grow older, their need for prescription medicine greatly increases due to the frequent development of age-related illnesses. Several of the more common age-related illnesses include: hypertension, angina, duodenal and gastric ulcers, arthritis and acute diabetes.

In the state of Pennsylvania, population of 12 million, there are 436,000 individuals enrolled in the PACE Program at a cost of $150 million per year with long-range cost studies still in progress. The Commonwealth of Virginia, which is half the size of Pennsylvania in population, estimates a 215,000 enrollment at a cost of $75 million per year.

This law would be effective 12 months after approval of the lottery by the voters of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The best of both worlds

Because my father was a university professor, I grew up in "college towns." The towns were not big themselves or even located near urban centers, but they afforded me a wonderful growing up experience by joining a rural atmosphere with plenty of culture.

At the time, that type of environment was all I knew and I considered it normal. But looking back, I now see I had many opportunities that others didn't.

One of those things was to have contact with many other cultures. I'm sure those who grew up in urban areas, especially the inner city, may have also had contact with different lifestyles. It was rather unique to have the same opportunity in a small town.

In both of the towns I lived in as a boy, the university was the major employer, attracting people from all over the country and the world. Although the town was small and out of the way, many lifestyles and cultures were represented by the families who came to be part of the state university.

This affected the town's school system. Though my graduating class had less than 400 students, it had an international quality. At bake sales you could experience delicacies from around the world.

Outside of the classroom I learned a lot just by talking to students from other lands. I came to understand that the way things are done in America are not necessarily the only or best way of doing things. Many class presentations were done by classmates who shared something from their native countries.

I can still remember learning about the sport of cricket from a friend named Keith who grew up in Great Britain and taught it to us for a social studies course project. In high school, one student who was from a Caribbean island, told me what it was like to grow up near the equator.

Then there was the matter of opportunities available to the public. Small towns usually suffer from small budgets. But with two colleges in my town, we could enjoy activities of all sorts. There was theater, sports, art and science museums, a wealth of authorities for seminars and other community related events.

Since my father was a head coach and physical education professor for the school, I was able to take advantage of the athletic facilities. Wrestling rooms, basketball courts, running tracks, baseball fields, swimming pools, saunas, whirlpools, and more were generally available. For me, a high school jock, it was near paradise.

One sort-of odd effect was the way the town's population fluctuated with the school year. From September to June the 20,000 students descended on the town and everything was geared to their lifestyle. Many stores focused on the 18- to 25-year-old customer. I never complained about the abundance of pizza and sub shops that operated in the area.

But in the summertime everything quieted down. With the students gone, the pace of the town slowed to a crawl. The "locals" finally relaxed.

My memories of summertime call up images of a lazy, hazy lemonade-sipping season. There was little traffic in town, everyone gathered at the swimming hole and the local little league baseball games were the big attraction in the evenings. It was almost a "Mayberry R.F.D." type of place.

I have nothing against "big cities." There are advantages to living in an urban area. I'm sure most people have pleasant memories of their youth. I'm just glad I had the opportunities I did and if I could do it all over again, I would do it the same way.

OP-ED

Association heard in General Assembly Frenzy gone-secondary stocks outperforming blue chips

LET'S TALK

By Rob Jones, president, Virginia Beach Education Association

Association members and staff lobbyists enjoyed an active and productive effort in the 1987 session of the General Assembly which ended last Saturday.

As always, school finance was at the top of the agenda for the Virginia Education Association. Full funding of the Standards of Quality, on an equitable state-wide basis, and the maintenance of that funding is critical for a complete and well-balanced program at the local level.

Even before the 1986 session, there were rumblings about the need for an overhaul of the state's method of funding education at the local level. Such rumblings generally come from sections of the state which feel the present system is unfair and inequitable.

Those rumblings also generated a report by the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Committee of the General Assembly which attempted to offer a "different" method of determining local funding.

The 1988 session may be the battleground for school funding formula revision. VEA has been, and will continue to be, monitoring reports and committee hearings that occur on an on-going basis.

Other legislative needs surface on an annual basis, such as requests for changes in the areas of educators' rights, matters of instruction, benefits, and student welfare.

VEA supported the Attorney General in a bill that she requested to be introduced which requires teachers to report to the principal students that they suspect of using drugs or alcohol on school premises. VEA is very interested in participating in the war against substance abuse, but it also recognized the position in which the teacher was being placed. With all the other responsibilities he or she already has, the requirement of separating lethargic and indifferent students from those who abuse substances may become an unmanageable situation.

Also threatening was the possible reaction from some parents in making such accusations against their children, even if the students are using drugs. With this in mind, VEA insisted that the reports be anonymous and that the teacher be guaranteed civil immunity in carrying out this requirement.

The Attorney General agreed, and the bill was still alive in the closing moments of the session.

VEA also supported a bill introduced by Delegate Bob Tata which called for school buildings to be made available to recognized groups for before and after school activities for children.

His bill, dubbed the "Latch-key" bill, was passed as a Virginia Beach bill only. Tata was deeply concerned about the number of kids who leave for school after parents go to work and who come home in the afternoon to an empty house.

VEA agreed that we had to start doing something about this problem and supported his bill. The new law would not require that the programs be funded by the school board, nor would teachers be required to staff them.

Rising health care costs and inconsistent plans for school districts across the state led Delegate Tom Moss of Norfolk to introduce a study resolution which would take a look at health care alternatives that could best meet the needs of educators.

One of the concepts of some kind of insurance authority which would be established at the state level to contract state-wide policies and establish guidelines implementing health care programs. This bill passed and will be administratively implemented this year.

Another on-going concern of teachers for years has been the seemingly infallibility of personnel files. It is incredible that just about anything can be placed in an employee's personnel file, but it can be almost impossible to get something taken out, even if it can be shown to be in error or unfounded.

A bill that the Association asked to be introduced, in its original form, would have prevented anonymous material from being placed in an employee's file.

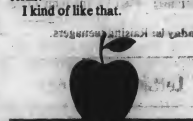

The legislative process changed it dramatically by offering a process to remove unfounded material, once it was discovered, either by "reasonable administrative review" or by the grievance procedure. The bill was still alive in the closing moments of the session.

Other bills that VEA supported included placing the lottery on the ballot in November (passed), establishment of a Human Rights Commission (passed in much weakened form), allowing the retirement of public employees at age 55 if they have 30 years of creditable service (passed), requesting localities to involve teachers in the decision-making process (passed), and others to numerous to describe here.

Fifty or more VEA members from around the state and a dozen or so staff members journey to Richmond each year to talk to legislators in their offices, in the lobbies, and in the elevators about the needs of education and educators.

We have learned the hard way that educational decisions are political decisions. We have learned that political endorsements, and contributions of time and money, earn recognition, access, and assistance in one degree or another.

We have also learned that legislators like to talk to teachers and that teachers have an impact when they visit Richmond. They are knowledgeable, professional, articulate about their concerns.

We teach the children.

Wall Street The Week Ahead

By George T. Stagg

How about that latest stroke of genius by the Prez? Howard Baker accepted the job after Ron Fournier said that Abe Lincoln was not available. Won't it be nice to hear something encouraging on the nightly news?

More worrisome to the market than the much leaked Tower Report, officially released last Friday followed by President Reagan's brilliant stroke which re-establishes some credibility to the scene in Washington, is the Latin American debt problem.

The decision by Brazil to suspend interest payment on their debt has created some concern that it might influence countries like Venezuela, Argentina and Ecuador which have also reached critical stages of debt rescheduling and loan negotiations.

However, what we are seeing on Wall Street is some variations of the basically bullish theme. The frenzy of the first 5-6 weeks of '87 has given way to thoughtful rotation and secondary stocks have been outperforming the blue chips.

Valuations are a bit too pricey to countenance the recent go-for-broke psychology, but volume has not been exactly chopped liver, as they say in the big apple.

The cash is just not coming in at the break-neck speed and selectivity remains the key.

The tone of the equity market at home and abroad remains positive. The Tokyo market continues to record new highs and U.S. stocks remain firm in Europe. Technically, the market is somewhat overextended but with few signs of deterioration.

The Dow is subject to daily swings of 20-30 points. What once was the exception has become the rule, but as long as the advance/decline ratios hold up, all is well. As indicated last week, we feel this market is going much higher.

Finally, last week a client came in and was obviously interested in a particular stock and asked the broker sitting next to me for a quote. Without breaking stride he responded, "Four score and seven years ago..."

We're gonna miss him.

Firehouse chili recipe

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

The professional firefighters of Virginia Beach go on duty at 8 a.m., and work for 24 hours. These men and women eat lunch around noon and have dinner around 6 p.m.

Some fire stations have designated cooks while other stations rotate the cooking duty. I work at Fire Station No. 16 on South Plaza Trail and we rotate the cooking on my shift.

Firefighters in the past have had a tendency to cook meals that are very simple and quick to prepare and are not too concerned with the high fat and cholesterol levels. Slowly but surely they are becoming aware of this and giving more thought to their menus.

But as tradition has it, a pot of chili can almost always be found sitting on the stove in a firehouse.

I have perfected my own recipe of "Firehouse Chili" and believe me — it has been tested by the most critical bunch of people on the face of the earth.

I hope you will try this recipe and change the measurements to suit your tastes, or in this case, tolerance!

- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 16-ounce can of red kidney beans
- 1 16-ounce can of pork and beans
- 18-ounce can of tomato paste
- 4 teaspoons of chili powder
- 4 teaspoons of pepper
- 1 teaspoon of ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon of cayenne pepper
- 2 cups of shredded sharp cheddar cheese

1 pint of sour cream

3 cups of water

1 box of saltine crackers

In a large skillet, put garlic, onion, green pepper and ground beef and cook until beef is browned.

Drain off fat and place beef in a large pot, add tomato paste, both cans of beans and all seasonings.

Allow the chili to simmer on low heat for one hour stirring occasionally.

When you are ready to eat, fill bowl and sprinkle some cheese on the top. Add one tablespoon of sour cream on the cheese and crush up some saltines and seasonings on top.

Now you're in business. Serves six people or three firefighters. Think fire safety in the kitchen.

Bicentennial Information

City Commission planning Bicentennial activities

The city of Virginia Beach Constitution's Celebration Commission and its support group met Feb. 12 for the first time since the Commission was appointed by the City Council Feb. 2.

The meeting focused on raising the constitutional literacy of the city over the next several months. To achieve this, several seminars on the constitution will be held throughout the city, a series of articles are planned, and a copy of the Constitution with a sign along its length, "I've read the Constitution," will be placed in area libraries for patrons.

Through this, it's hoped the city's Constitutional literacy will increase.

Residents can help the Commission by sending suggestions and information about activities being planned by local organizations to celebrate the bicentennial of the Constitution to: Constitution's Celebration Commission, Municipal Center, Box 1787, Virginia Beach, Va. 23466.

Lillian Youell, an educator, is the chairperson of the Commission. She has been involved in several bicentennial celebrations. Vice Mayor Meyera Oberdorf will serve as liaison to the City Council and others of the Commission are leaders of civic, religious, historical, patriotic, educational, legal, business, military, racial and ethnic groups.

"It's appropriate that the Commission reflect the cosmopolitan make-up of the city," Youell said. "However, for the past decade or so, our nation has been celebrating their differences. The Constitution's bicentennial presents an opportunity for us to recognize our shared values. After all, the Constitution 'constitutes' us as one people."

Be careful with pesticides and herbicides

The Urban Forest

By Paul Revell
State Forester

It will not be long before many readers will be springing up their yards for shrubs. You may already be visiting local gardening centers for a variety of supplies. Among the supplies being purchased for the yard are herbicides and pesticides. While herbicides and pesticides have their place in keeping your tree healthy, they are often misused. You can avoid wasting money and possibly injuring yourself if you learn a little more about these items.

Many people have the mistaken impression that spraying with pesticides should be done as a preventative step early in the spring. However, most pesticides do not persist on the plant for more than a few days or after a heavy rain. Spraying or applying when no insect is present is, then, a waste of money. Furthermore, pesticide formulations tend to be effective for only one or a few insects, having no effect on several other insects. No one pesticide sprayed before any insect activity is present will help you to avoid an infestation. In fact, spraying may kill one or more beneficial insects on trees that help keep the more harmful ones in check.

Besides being insect specific, many popular pesticide formulations are time specific as well. They should be applied at certain critical points of an insect's life cycle. When applied at other than key times in the pest's life cycle, the application is useless.

Many homeowners fail to follow label directions on pesticides, resulting in damage to the tree, beneficial wildlife, and possibly the person applying it, too. If not handled according to label directions, the pesticide can poison the user. Applying the wrong concentration may damage your tree and nearby vegetation as well. Don't make the mistake of thinking that doubling the concentration makes the spray or application more effective.

Many herbicides and pesticides applied to lawns can be quite damaging to trees. The labels of these products will tell you this. Taking a few minutes to read the label is time well spent. Improperly disposing of unwanted or unused chemicals can adversely affect plants and animals as well as pollute water.

Despite the wide variety of chemicals on the market, the best way to keep trees healthy is proper watering and fertilization. Healthy, vigorous trees resist many insect infestations. Remember, too, that many insects are quite harmless even though they look otherwise. Their populations may swell for a few weeks in the summer only to later disappear with no harm resulting to your trees.

Resist the urge to apply chemicals indiscriminately to your trees. Consult the professionals at your local gardening center for advice on the proper chemical selections and timing of application. Be sure to read labels carefully and follow directions. By obtaining proper advice and keeping spraying to a minimum, you will save money and have healthier more attractive trees.

Virginia Beach Safety Council to host luncheon on March 13

The Virginia Beach Safety Council will be host for the Annual Tidewater Regional Safety Council luncheon on Friday, March 13 at noon at Tandom's Pine Tree Inn, 2932 Virginia Beach Blvd.

The guest speaker will be John Hanna, deputy commissioner for Transportation Safety, Department of Motor Vehicles. Hanna will address the new motorist legislation and the newest programs offered by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Attending also will be Barbara Bolton, R.N., executive director of the Virginia Auto Safety Alliance and Betty Stewart, executive director of the Virginia Safety Association who are working on transportation safety issues at the General Assembly. R.S.V.P. by calling 427-4567 by March 10. The cost of the luncheon is $5.

New proposal for intersection should ease tie-ups

The average stopped delay would be reduced to 37-38 seconds now, but would move upward to 62.5 by 2004.

The other proposal offers a grade-separated partial cloverleaf interchange with the heavy through movement on Princess Anne Road passing over the intersection uninterrupted. The heavy left turn volumes on Princess Anne Road would be accommodated with loop ramps in the northwest and southeast quadrants of the intersection.

The left turn volumes on South Witthuck Road and Kempville Road would be accommodated with a two-phase signal with one phase handling the dual left turns and the other phase accommodating a dual through lanes on South Witthuck and Kempville Road.

The project would cost $12,440,000, $7,240,000 for construction and $5.2 million for land acquisition.

Barnes said the original urban interchange was constructed to correct the congested junction of State Route 60 and US 19 in Clearwater, Florida. He said the construction has changed the course of interchange design in 15 states and over 75 urban interchanges are built or are presently under design in the country.

As proposed the urban interchange would accommodate all left turns with dual turn lanes and a three-phase traffic signal to help smooth these maneuvers.

Phase one will accommodate dual lane left turns for southbound Witthuck Road and northbound Kempville Road simultaneously.

Phase two will accommodate dual lane left turns for eastbound Princess Anne Road and westbound Princess Anne Road simultaneously.

Phase three will accommodate dual lane through vehicles on southbound South Witthuck Road and northbound Kempville Road.

The concept is designed for highly developed areas.

The project, if approved, will take 18 months to two years to complete.

Barnes also said that the same concept is used in Fairfax County off I-95, but the through traffic goes under instead of over.

Barnes said that traffic going by businesses is an asset to the businesses until the traffic exceeds the ability of the road to accommodate it conveniently. Then it becomes a liability.

Civitan Club presents "Alice in Wonderland"

Club donated $600 to the Respite Center for a piece of equipment that makes it possible for a handicapped student to get out of his or her wheelchair after having been in it all day. That, she said, is a worthwhile cause.

While Phelps helps administrate the Ocean House through her job as a Civitan Club member she is excited to see it operate. "There are a lot of camps for retarded children," she said. "We wanted to design a program that was affordable and fun for an adult."

Even so, the cost of 24-hour care is beyond the means of some families, so gifts from the Civitan Club and other groups make it possible for some handicapped adults to get a vacation and do things they would not have been able to do otherwise.

Whether the money goes to "purchase a rug, a piece of therapeutic equipment or whatever is necessary," said Phelps, the efforts of the Civitan Club and others are needed.

With this year's play, Civitan Club members are hoping the weather is better than last year when over 2,500 tickets were made available and less than 500 came to the program.

O'Nan hopes this year's program reaches more people. Not only is he responsible for bringing in the drama troupe, but as the father of a 23-year-old mentally retarded son, O'Nan enjoys the event itself.

Speaking as a parent, O'Nan said the play "gives them a good educational and cultural activity." Activities like circuses, he said, are good but do not involve the child. This drama troupe gets them into the action.

elements for an effective command master chief program," says Sissell. "I have no inhibitions about going to see (them). The program doesn't work if you don't have a good working relationship."

Sissell admits a snag in his total involvement concept: "Paperwork is what kills me," he said. "I come in early and stay late. Everyone of those files is somebody's problem or affects an individual. If I sit on them, then that's not helping them any."

"Cosmic Conundrums" is planetarium's March show

The Virginia Beach City Public Schools' Planetarium has announced that the public program for the month of March is entitled "Cosmic Conundrums."

This program is composed of six astronomy-related topics that remain a puzzle to scientists. Theories of where the moon came from are discussed, and the most acceptable ones are emphasized.

The puzzle of the extreme tilt of the axis of Uranus is covered. How did it settle into a position where its axis is tilted nine degrees below its plane of orbit?

Another question is what really caused the trees to flatten for five miles around the area of the Tunguska forest in Russia, in 1908? Was it meteor, comet, spaceship, or atomic explosion?

Also included in the program are discussions of cosmic rays, quasars, and the questions of where it all began.

The program is free to the public and will be given on Sundays and Tuesdays from 7 to 8 p.m. For more information call the Planetarium office at 486-1855.

Silkscreen prints by Beach artist at Humana gallery

Virginia Beach artist Sandra Wood will display her silkscreen prints until the end of March at the Humana Gallery, a satellite space for art sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center.

The eight pieces on view are nature scenes and Tidewater landscape, done with bright hues and simple shapes.

Wood, an area native, earned an associate's degree in art from Tidewater Community College in 1985.

She has participated in many local art shows, including Ghent Gallery, TCC student gallery, the Ghent Arts Festival, the Seawall and Neptune Festivals.

The Humana Gallery, located in the dining area of Bayside Hospital, is free and open to the public. Hours are Monday through Saturday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Museum offers program for area young children

The Virginia Marine Science Museum's Pre-School Program is now open to individual parents with children, ages three or four years old, on the last Tuesday of each month, beginning March 31.

The program, which starts at 10:45 a.m., begins with an introduction by Wahly White, the museum's puppet. Following a story about the sea, the parents and children will be given a tour of selected exhibits in the museum.

The cost of the program will fall under group admission rates: $1.50 for children and $2.50 for parents. After the program, parents and children will be free to take a self-guided tour of the rest of the museum.

Reservations are not necessary. Call the museum at 425-3476 and request a Pre-School Programs brochure for more information.

"Taking the J. Train," a color photograph by Jerry Kelley, is now on display at the Municipal Center Gallery for the month of March.

Area photographer exhibits work at Municipal gallery

Through the month of March, Virginia Beach photographer Jerry Kelly will display 12 color photographs at the Municipal Center Gallery, a satellite space for art sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center.

A Norfolk native, Kelly began experimenting with photography as a hobby in the early 50s. His first camera was one he fabricated from scrap wood, paper, cloth and an war surplus lens.

The artist then worked for McIntosh Studio of Photography for over 10 years, learning the processes of black and white and color photography.

Since then, Kelly has worked as a photographer for the Naval Air Reserve, as well as commercially, freelance and in studios. He has also spent six months traveling cross-country photographing the landscape and entering regional and national photo exhibitions.

The Municipal Gallery is free and open to the public. Hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Gallery is located at the Princess Anne Courthouse complex.

Call VBAC at 425-0000 for more information.

CBN University drama department to present "The Chalk Garden"

CBN University through its Drama Department will present Enid Bagnold's award-winning play "The Chalk Garden" on March 13, 14, 20 and 21 at 8 p.m., and on March 22 at 2:30 p.m.

The British play, first performed on the New York stage in 1956, will be presented in the university theater located in the Classroom Building at 1000 Centerville Turnpike, the site of CBN University and CBN Center. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens.

For reservations, call 424-7000, ext. 4245.

Thursday afternoon programs to begin at Marine Museum

"Sharks" will be the topic of the first in a series of free Thursday afternoon programs at the Virginia Marine Science Museum, beginning Thursday, March 5.

The programs, about 45 minutes in length, will take place at 3 p.m. in the museum classroom. Other program topics, aimed toward a general audience, include whales, local invertebrates and beach finds.

No reservations are necessary. For more information, contact the museum's education department at 425-3476.

Stress: Mistaken beliefs lead to frustration

Most of the ideas that produce stress can be reduced to a few mistaken beliefs about ourselves and the world. These beliefs are emotionally charged and highly evaluative. They lead us to make cruel and impossible demands upon ourselves and others.

Some stress-inducing beliefs are:

- Holding superstitious beliefs that worry prevents mistakes and misfortune, and helps anticipate the future.

- Evaluating yourself as less worthy or deserving a person because you fall short of some standard of performance or expectation of others.

- Believing that your emotional security and the prospect of rewarding relationships are tied to specific people and situations upon which you depend for affection and love.

- Regarding yourself as inferior or permanently disadvantaged as compared with some other people making it difficult for you to lead a satisfying life.

- Having extensive personal boundaries, overidentification with too many people, things, and ideas, so that you are vulnerable to irritation and threat in many areas.

- Adopting a competitive, win-lose orientation that makes living into a series of contests and tends to put your self-esteem on the line in every life situation.

- Engaging in moralistic thinking about how others should and should not behave that leads to feelings of anger, frustration, and moral indignation.

- Attributing the negative or disappointing behavior of other people to their enduring intentions or basic personality traits, leading to condemnation of others, anger and intolerance.

- Believing that you have a right to be free from discomfort or deserve to get what you want, which produces a low tolerance for life's inevitable frustration.

Keep warm!

If exposure to cold temperatures causes unusually bad pain in your hands, see your doctor.

Reap Social Security advantages with Direct Deposit

Residents of the local area who receive Social Security benefits can reap several advantages by taking part in the direct deposit program and have their checks deposited in an account in a financial institution, a Social Security manager said recently.

Checks are sent directly to a checking or savings account in a bank, savings institution, credit union, or other financial institution, rather than to the person's home.

Some advantages are:

- A person does not have to be home to get the check.

- The money will be immediately available in an account.

- There is no worry about the check being lost or stolen.

- There is no need to stand in line to cash or deposit the check.

- It is safer to keep money in an account rather than at home or on one's person.

- A checkbook provides a written record for keeping track of one's money.

To arrange for direct deposit, a person should complete direct deposit form SF-1199A. The form can be obtained at any financial institution. A person's Social Security check contains all the information necessary to complete the form. A person should check to make sure the institution will handle the account.

It is very important for people with direct deposit to continue notifying Social Security of any address change so they will receive any notices sent about their benefits.

More information about direct deposit can be obtained at any Social Security office. The address and telephone number of the nearest Social Security office can be found in the telephone directory.

Volunteers needed to work with elderly

Virginia Beach Comprehensive Mental Health Services is seeking volunteers to work with the elderly.

One or two volunteers are needed to drive elderly citizens in the Pungo area to medical appointments one day a week. Potential volunteers should have a good driving record, be available to take an eight-hour defensive driving course, and be willing to drive a 15-passenger, city-owned van.

Several volunteers are also needed to spend an hour or two each week engaging in social activities with an elderly person.

Comprehensive Mental Health Services has several other volunteer opportunities, including openings for daytime and evening crisis phone volunteers. For further information, call Jo-Ann Clegg at 490-0583.

Nevala wins AARP award

Mrs. Madeline Becker Nevala of Virginia Beach has been selected by AARP, the American Association of Retired Persons, as a winner of an AARP/Elderhostel Award for 1987.

Nevala was chosen by the AARP National Awards Committee on the basis of her voluntary contributions to Virginia Beach. These activities included being a third term president of the Virginia Beach Chapter of the AARP, a member of the Mayor's Committee on Aging, volunteer aide in court for Judge J. Davis Reed (Juvenile Court), and her work in initiating and running the senior citizens' Saturday Night Ballroom.

As an AARP/Elderhostel Award winner, Nevala will receive a one-week learning vacation at any of the Elderhostel programs now being offered on more than 800 college campuses throughout the country.

Designed for persons 60 years of age and older, Elderhostel provides the opportunity for older persons to live in the college dormitories, eat in the dining halls, and study courses which interest them. Field trips to local points of interest and social activities are also usually included in the program.

Seniors seek full-time driver

The senior citizens in Deep Creek have requested that City Council include a full-time driver in the 1987-88 operating budget. A part-time driver is provided now.

Travelogue at Senior Center

Vicki Campbell, assistant director of the Chesapeake Public Library and a seasoned traveler, will describe her journey to Israel and show slides of the trip at a St. Patrick's Day covered dish luncheon at the Chesapeake Senior Citizen's Center March 13.

The luncheon and "arm chair travelogue" will begin at 12:15 p.m. at the center, 100 Outlaw St. For information, call 543-9211, extension 265.

Senior spirit expected at Mini Olympics

Come show your "Senior Spirit" at the Chesapeake Mini Olympics! Even if you don't complete in the games, it's lots of fun to come cheer for your friends and club members at their race, hit and throw. The Olympics will be held Thursday, April 23, 1987 from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m. at the Indian River High School Stadium. If it rains, the games will be held the next Thursday, April 30, 1987. Call 543-9211 ext. 265 for further information.

Three local high school students awarded DAR Good Citizen pins

By Mrs. Eugene T. Connors
Special To The Virginia Beach Sun

The DAR Good Citizen is a member of the senior class of accredited high schools who displays, to an outstanding degree, the qualities of leadership, dependability, service and patriotism.

Mrs. William F. Vose, DAR Good Citizen chairman, recently honored three such students with the presentation of the DAR Good Citizen Pin at a meeting of the Lynnhaven Parish Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution.

Selected by their respective schools to receive this recognition are:

Andria Lyn Padgett, daughter of Wayne and Linda Padgett. Padgett is the SCA president of Green Run High School. She is a three year member of the National Honor Society, active in drama, Latin Club, is senior class senator, attended the Governors School for the Gifted and Talented and the Freedoms Foundation Youth Leadership Conference in Valley Forge. She was a 1986 Virginia Beach Neptune Festival Princess and aspires to a career in international business or law and eventually in politics.

Michael J. Dullaghan, son of Mr. William E. Dullaghan and the late Mrs. Dullaghan. As a member of the National Honor Society and the varsity golf team at Kempville High School, he has been selected to attend the Harvard and Old Dominion Universities Model United Nations Conferences, Virginia Boys State and Virginia Junior Science and Humanities Symposium. He is listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" and a three year participant in the March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon. He plans to major in chemistry and pursue a career in medicine.

Sonya Ervin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace B. Adams. Erin is president of the senior class at Tabernacle Baptist School. Active in athletics, the choir, yearbook staff and the American Christian Honor Society, she was Homecoming Queen and is listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students." She is also an active volunteer at Leigh Memorial Hospital and plans to seek a career in the medical field.

Williams Elementary celebrates 100 days at their "new" school

As a project commemorating the first 100 days at Williams Elementary School (formerly Williams Intermediate School), staff and students participated in a variety of activities, centering around the number 100.

The project began with the kindergarten classes, said principal Betsy Thigpen, since counting to 100 is part of the curriculum. But many other grade levels joined in as well.

Some activities scheduled on February 9 included:

- Kindergarten classes cut out 100 pink and red hearts for Valentine's Day, counted them aloud for teachers Cheryl Wheeler, Lynn MacCall, and Phyllis MacMillan, and then taped all the hearts on classroom doors and in the hallway.

- Kindergarten classes collected 100 storybooks and piled them up to see how high they would reach.

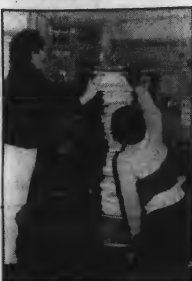

- Kindergartners counted 100 popcorn kernels and raisins for nourishment during snack time.

- Dr. David Mutter, staff development specialist from the Office of Curriculum and Staff Development Services, shook hands with 100 people during a visit to the school.

- Upper grades measured 100 feet of hallways during math classes.

Lynn MacCall helps a student cut out paper hearts.

Kempville, Arrowhead students honored

Maury Riganto Student Athlete Awards have been presented to Darian Keith Simmons, of the Kempville Recreation area, and Yvonne Anita Merkel, of the Arrowhead recreation area.

Keith, 11, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Simmons, and has participated in the area baseball league for three years and was starting pitcher for the Midget Boys Baseball Team Championship for 1986. He attends Providence Elementary School.

Yvonne, 17, is the daughter of Anita and Michael Merkel. She is in the Senior Girls Basketball League in Arrowhead for the past two years, and also promoted and assisted with the Farm League for boys and girls. She attends Kempville High School.

Vo-Tech student wins annual poster contest

Keith Cole, a student at Virginia Beach Vo-Tech Center, won first place and $400 in the High School Division of the "Keep Virginia Green" Poster Contest sponsored by Virginia Forestry Association, Virginia Department of Forestry, and Division of Soil and Water.

Cheers. Certificates of Achievement and trophies for the winning schools will be presented to the top four winners at the Virginia Forestry Association's Awards Luncheon on Saturday, March 28, at The Homestead in Hot Springs, Va.

Windsor Oaks student takes 2nd place in contest

Windsor Oaks Elementary School second grader, Cicely Rodgers, recently won second place in the kindergarten through grade three category of the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Essay Contest.

The essay contest is a Tidewater area event.

Cicely is the daughter of Angela and Kim Rodgers. Her teacher is Nancy Chandler.

Two Beach residents promoted at Leigh Memorial Hospital

Two Virginia Beach men were recently promoted at Leigh Memorial Hospital.

Tom Ashbrook, a resident of Thalia, was named the hospital's director of food services. He previously worked as the assistant food services director.

Ron Walker, a resident of the city's Lake Edwards section, was promoted to assistant director of materials management at the hospital.

Owen B. Pickett to be honored at 9th Annual Jefferson-Jackson Dinner

The Virginia Beach Democratic Committee will sponsor the Ninth Annual Jefferson-Jackson Dinner in honor of Congressman Owen B. Pickett. The dinner will be held on Saturday, March 14, at 6 p.m. at Grand Affairs in Virginia Beach.

Proceeds from the $35 per person dinner will be used for the election of Democratic candidates in local and statewide elections and other activities relating to the Democratic Party.

Lt. Governor Wilder and Attorney General Terry will be in attendance as well as other local, state and national leaders.

"More than 600 persons are expected to attend this year's dinner," stated Linda Nichols, chair of the event.

For more information contact 464-0560 or 393-4093.

Conrad joins real estate firm

Janet T. Conrad has joined Divaris Real Estate of Virginia Beach as a leasing consultant for commercial office space. Conrad was formerly a title insurance underwriter with Colonial Service Corporation of Virginia Beach.

Conrad graduated cum laude from Old Dominion University in Norfolk with a BS in business administration with a major in finance. She won three scholarships, among them one from the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers and another from the American Business Women's Association.

The Lynnhaven Parish Chapter, National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) will meet on Saturday, March 15, at 10 a.m., at the Francis Land House, 3131 Virginia Beach Blvd.

Volunteer donors who are chapter members, Mrs. Eugene T. Connors, Mrs. C. Worthington Fowler, Mrs. Robert E. Meyerhoffer and Mrs. Alan P. Monteleone, will give a special tour of the house including insight into 18th century life in Princess Anne County, for those attending.

Mrs. John G. Ferguson will be hostess for the meeting. Reservations may be made by calling 468-0809.

Mrs. William J. Scullion Jr., chapter vice-regent, and Mrs. Rice M. Youell will represent the chapter at the Virginia DAR State Conference at the Hotel Roanoke from March 17 to 19. Mrs. Connors and Mrs. Fowler will also attend the conference.

Chapter members will be traveling to Montpelier, the home of James and Dolly Madison, for the wreath-laying ceremony on Sunday, March 15. The home will open to the public on March 16, Madison's birthday, as part of the celebration of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Linkhorn Park Garden Club to meet March 13

The Linkhorn Park Garden Club will meet on Friday, March 13, at 11 a.m., at the Princess Anne County Club.

The program "Who We Are and What We Do" will be presented by Mrs. Donald Miller, president of the Council of Garden Clubs.

Members are asked to bring for judging an all green arrangement in honor of St. Patrick, or an arrangement of their choice. Horticulture specimens are to be evergreens or any flowering shrub.

Announcements and Meetings

Cooperative Extension Service to hold small poultry flock seminar March 9

Management of small poultry flocks will be the topic of a Monday, March 9 seminar sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/Cooperative Extension Service.

The seminar will start at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in the classroom of the Agriculture Department Building. The seminar is for those who have and those who may be interested in starting small, home poultry flocks.

Dr. Phillip Clauer, Virginia Tech Extension poultry specialist, will lead the seminar. He will discuss legal considerations, facilities and equipment, obtaining stock, brooding chicks, nutrition, laying management and disease prevention.

The small poultry flock seminar is free and open to the public. For more information, phone Tom Baker, Extension Agent, Agriculture, at 427-4769.

Volleyball challenge between City Council and Parks and Rec set for March 7 at Brandon Jr. High

Some City Council members will compete against a team from the Parks and Recreation Department in a volleyball game on Saturday, March 7 at 5 p.m. at Brandon Junior High School.

Vice Mayor Meyers Oberdorfer, who announced the event Monday evening, noted that the competition has been changed from basketball to volleyball. She said the change in the sport may have something to do with Council's performance in basketball last year.

Council members will be permitted to fill their ranks with guest players to make up their team.

1987-1988 officers chosen for Friends of the Francis Land House

Officers of the Friends of the Francis Land House for the 1987-1988 year were elected at the organizations recently held first annual meeting.

Mrs. Fred (Glenda) Knowles was installed as chairman; Mrs. Everett (Kaye) Mitchell, Jr., vice-chairman; Charles Burke, treasurer; Mrs. Donald (Johanne) Miller, corresponding secretary; and Paul Lankford, recording secretary. They were installed by City Councilwoman Mrs. Reba S. McClanan, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Francis Land House.

McClanan expressed appreciation to all who had worked in support of the Friends of the Francis Land House during the past nine months, especially outgoing chairman Mrs. Eugene (Judith) Connors and Ways and Means Chairman Mrs. Owen (Melle-Rose) Moore, Jr.

Virginia Beach vacationers stuck on saltwater taffy

Certain types of travel excite certain food cravings.

Many mountain hikers won't hit the trail without crunchy granola in their backpacks. And few beach lovers would shake the sand from their blankets and head home without a ritual box of saltwater taffy.

How did sandy beaches and this sticky, sweet confection become so inseparable? Virginia Beach, the popular East Coast resort known as "The Beach Lovers Beach," has a resident expert on the subject.

He is Leigh P. Forbes, president of Forbes Candies, Inc., a company started in the 1930s by his father, the late Charles Forbes.

The candymaker relates a story told by his father as to how saltwater taffy got its name. Back around the turn of the century, a little girl was strolling with her mother on a beach boardwalk where a candymaker had set out a bin of unwrapped taffy. Because it was a warm summer day, the taffy glistened with beads of moisture.

The little girl exclaimed, "Look! This taffy has salt water in it!" The candymaker overheard her, recognized the promotional value, and renamed his product accordingly.

"Actually, there isn't a drop of salt water in the taffy," says Forbes. But as a teenager working in his father's store, he tried to give the customers what they wanted.

"They seemed disappointed when I told them there's no ocean water in our taffy," he explains. "So I made up a long, involved story about how we waited until just before dawn, when the sediment in the ocean water had settled to the bottom, and no swimmers were out there. Then I told them, we gathered nice, fresh ocean water to put in the taffy."

With a wry laugh, he says, "One day, Dad overheard me and chewed me out. End of story."

Was it exciting to grow up with a candy store in the family? Forbes shrugs. "I started working part time in the store when I was 13, scrubbing candy cookpots. There aren't a lot of thrills to that."

Leigh Forbes has even earlier recollections of the business, begun by his father as a boy of 12 on the streets of nearby Norfolk, where Charles Forbes made homemade candy, loaded it in a wagon and sold it store-to-store.

As young Charles continued to grow, so did his candy business. Marriage, the arrival of three children, and even the onset of World War II did not slow down the candy-making.

"While Dad served in the Merchant Marine, Mother kept the business going," says Leigh Forbes. "I remember her bringing home saltwater taffy every night and spreading it on the dining room table. My brother, my sister and I helped her pack it in boxes to sell at the store the next day."

With four stores at the resort, the Forbes business is the oldest family-owned and operated manufacturing and retail business in Virginia Beach, now Virginia's most populous city. Since the first store opened in 1934, Forbes Candy has produced more than five billion pieces of saltwater taffy. That's enough to make a multi-colored, multi-flavored band of saltwater taffy pieces that would stretch three-quarters of the way around the earth.

Actually, there are few places on earth the sweet, chewy confection has not been.

"We've mailed it all over the world," Forbes says. "During World War II, people from home would send Forbes saltwater taffy to boys overseas. We heard that some of those boxes made it to soldiers in hospitals behind enemy lines. Out saltwater taffy got into places where letters couldn't."

Today, the Forbes family tradition continues. Leigh Forbes' son has joined him in the business, which has diversified into a chain of one-stop vacation supply centers.

"Now, in addition to our fresh, high-quality candy, you can buy beach towels, suntan lotion, gifts and souvenirs, just about anything you want to bring to the beach or take home with you," the president points out.

For many people, a visit to Virginia Beach isn't complete without at least one "saltwater taffy run." Today, the confection is produced in 15 flavors; peanut butter is the most popular. A modern trend toward fitness has not reduced purchases of the sweet. Says Forbes, "When young ladies come in here and say, 'Oh, I can't buy saltwater taffy because I'm watching my figure,' I put their minds at rest right away."

"I tell them, 'You buy the candy and I'll watch your figure.' They always leave with a box of saltwater taffy."

For more information on Virginia Beach accommodations and activities, the resort operates a toll-free telephone line from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. seven days a week. Call 1-800-446-8035, or write the Visitors Bureau at P.O. Box 200, Virginia Beach, VA 23458.

Green Run English teacher and Francis Land House docent, Paul Lankford, learns much from books, history

By James D. Barr
Staff Writer

When Paul Lankford, a Virginia Beach resident and chairman of the English department at Green Run High School, was attending the College of William and Mary, he said he was really influenced by the school's 18th century atmosphere.

Now as the recording secretary on the executive committee of the Friends of the Francis Land House and the museum's first male docent, his volunteer efforts allow him to personally experience that time period.

"When I pull on my knee britches," he said, "it is a way to relive the 18th century."

Past Chairman of the Friends of the Francis Land House Judith Connors pointed out that Lankford's initial involvement was somewhat courageous, seeing that the museum's volunteer help is made up mostly of women from local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other organizations. Connors said she remembers the other docents teasing him by calling him "the token male."

"I heard it used," said Lankford of the humorous designation. Though there are now six men involved as docents, he said being one of the only men, has its advantages.

"I get such wonderful attention," he said. "It is a delightful experience."

Lankford's service at the Francis Land House for two Saturdays each month as a costumed guide and his position on the executive committee are not the only things in which he is involved. At age 39, he is the chairman of the state's largest high school English department and is now helping to organize a statewide convention for the Virginia Association of English Teachers, which will be held in Virginia Beach later this fall. He has also been involved in past Azalea Festivals and is a member of the Men's Garden Club of Tidewater.

While his wife Deborah, also an English teacher at Green Run High School, said juggling all those responsibilities keeps him more than busy, he said "it's difficult, but fun."

"When I pull on my knee britches, it is a way to relive the 18th century." — Paul Lankford on his costumed volunteer work at the Francis Land House museum.

Though he was a member of the first docent class, Lankford said before the Land House opened he followed the activities of many to preserve it.

He said he always loved Rose Hall, which was its name before it was a museum, and admired it as he drove past it on Virginia Beach Boulevard. He said he became officially involved after reading an ad in the paper which said the museum was looking for docents.

"I wanted to do something for the city," he said. "Virginia Beach has been very good to me."

Pete Owens, a Kempville resident who was in the second docent class for the Francis Land House, said it was encouraging for him to know there was another man who had gone through the process and was now fully involved. "I give him full credit for being the trailblazer," he said.

Sue Taylor, administrator of the Francis Land House, said having Lankford involved has really helped the museum. Because he is the product of an established family from the Eastern Shore, she said he is aware of the rich history of the area and is able to give insight to the mindset of the men in the 18th century.

Taylor identified Lankford as a "laid back, enthusiastic type of person."

Though it takes some amount of "rah-rah" activity to raise the money to buy furnishings and educational supplies for the museum, Taylor said Lankford "isn't going to be bouncing off the walls but he is very encouraging in a quiet way."

His love for the Hampton Roads area dates back to growing up in nearby Franklin. Then, after getting a degree in English language and literature from William and Mary in 1969, he started his teaching career at Bay-

Council discusses executive compensation plan; consultants recommend changes in system

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council should impose a freeze on executive pay for the 1987-88 budget year, according to Councilman John R. Moss.

Presenting an executive and classification pay plan of his own Monday afternoon, Moss said that Virginia Beach is paying its executives more than the maximum salaries paid in the local area for similar positions.

"It is obvious to me," the report states, that "Virginia Beach is only competing against itself."

Moss would tie the salary of the city manager to the city's per capita income. Other executives would be limited to certain percentages of the manager's salary.

The city's consultants, Cresap, McCormick and Paget, presented Council with their study of executive and classified compensation which recommended eight grades for executives with wide salary ranges.

The range recommended the city manager's salary start at a minimum of $73,920 and ended in a maximum $110,880.

Charles Hendricks, representing the consulting firm, said that Richmond, a smaller city, pays its city manager $100,000.

The report recommends that the city's market position should be to pay competitively with other comparable cities nationwide, while maintaining a leadership position within the Southeast.

The reports show that Virginia Beach pays its executives less than comparable "national" salaries, but generally higher than the surveyed salaries in the Southeast and Southern Virginia.

The city manager now receives $90,000 plus $4,800 annually as allowance.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan pointed out that the comparison between the Richmond and Virginia Beach salaries was not applicable. She said that Richmond was looking for a black-city manager and to find one qualified had to offer the greater amount of money. She also said that Fairfax pays its manager $95,000.

Under the plan proposed by the consultants, the range would be open with no automatic step increases for executives.

Positions included in the executive job evaluation plan are city manager, city attorney, Deputy city manager, the three assistant city managers, chief deputy city attorney, city physician, department directors (19), fire chief, police chief, real estate assessor and city clerk.

City Council backs law firm's Lake Gaston litigation fees

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The law firm of Mays, Valentine, which has been criticized by some City Council members for the high fees charged to the city, will continue to represent the city in the Lake Gaston pipeline litigation.

Council Monday afternoon adopted a resolution "ratifying and confirming" past and future legal work done by the firm in respect to the Lake Gaston project.

Mayor Robert G. Jones, who is an attorney himself, and Councilwoman Reba McClanahan, who is married to an attorney, dissented in the 9-2 vote approving the resolution. They have both questioned the fees charged by the firm.

The resolution reads that the firm has represented the city's best interests in the lawsuit to the best of its ability, and commends the job the firm has done so far.

More than 200 contractors expected this weekend at the Cavalier for state convention

By James D. Barr
Staff Writer

If the air conditioning or plumbing fails at the Cavalier Hotel this weekend, there won't be any problem finding someone to fix it.

This weekend over 600 members and suppliers of the Virginia Plumbing, Heating, Cooling Contractors (PHCC) Association will meet at the hotel for their state convention.

Vikki Olander, executive secretary for the Southeastern Virginia Association of the PHCC, said the number of people there may be higher due to last minute registration. She said included in the group will be state officials and over 100 plumbing apprentices from the state's two apprenticeship schools.

This is the 64th PHCC state convention, bringing together the four regional associations and almost 100 distributors and suppliers.

The convention's exposition hall will feature over 70 booths displaying "all the new equipment," said Jim Steine, treasurer of the Southeastern PHCC and co-owner of Atomic Plumbing and Heating in Virginia Beach. "It's the best place in the world to see the new staff and ask questions of the representatives."

Steine said the exposition is one of the best features of the convention. He said contractors get catalogs with pictures of new items all the time and salesmen visit throughout the year, but at the exposition you can see the equipment demonstrated and see what it can actually do.

Olander said the convention also offers the contractors a number of seminars. Along with the latest products, they will get "the latest techniques," she said. Other seminars will include information on business insurance, tax information, job site safety, employment programs and a driver improvement class.

The driver improvement course consists of movies, classes and test and offered by insurance companies "to help bring down the insurance costs" of the contractor who has his trucks on the road, said Steine.

"It's just one thing they have to help the contractors," said Steine. "Whatever the speakers talk about they make it pertain to

Virginia Beach city clerk Ruth Smith maintains IIMC Academy membership

Mrs. Ruth Hodges Smith, CMC, City Clerk-Clerk of Council of the city of Virginia Beach, has been accepted into the continued membership of the International Institute of Municipal Clerks (IIMC) Academy for Advanced Education.

The IIMC Academy for Advanced Education was instituted in 1981 to further the professional education of municipal clerks to enhance their skills as needed to meet the challenges of the office of municipal clerk.

Every four years, the Academy member has to demonstrate that he or she has actively engaged in educational and professional participation that keeps one current with the changing events in the local government scene.

The Academy member is required to obtain a specific number of points through completion of recognized institute or college courses, completion of seminars and workshops offered by other professional associations, teaching and writing in the profession, attendance at professional meetings and conferences, and honors and awards received for specific achievements.

Presently, less than four per-

Lillian Vernon Corporation is here.

By now most people know that the city's Department of Economic Development, along with the help of others, including the governor, has attracted to the city one of the world's largest catalog merchandising companies.

The recruiting coup means a lot to the city. Once its 400,000 square-foot distribution center is built at the Oceana West Industrial Park, 450 jobs will be created. Along with the jobs is a $7 million payroll. More important to the city is the increased economic stability it will provide in relation to the city's dependence on the seasonal tourist trade.

With 60 percent of Lillian Vernon's business coming between October and December, 250 to 300 more people will be added to the payroll during that time, perfectly complementing the area's need for jobs after the summer season is over.

Less directly but just as important, local businesses will also be affected by the company's move to the area. Along with the new jobs it will bring, the company will purchase and use local products and services. Because the company is so big, the "ripple effect" will be significant.

Along with the new jobs it will bring, the company will purchase and use local products and services. Because the company is so big, the "ripple effect" will be significant.

Bringing the company here took three years of behind-the-scenes work. City representatives anticipated that the company and the city would benefit each other and were willing to go toe-to-toe with other states to woo the company here.

At the news conference surrounding the recent announcement of the agreement, Director of Economic Development A. James De Bellis said, "This is truly a milestone in our city's economic development."

With expected sales of $150 million for 1987 and the new complex scheduled to finish in 1988, the company's move to Virginia Beach is much awaited and the economic future of the city is looking better than ever. — J.D.B.

Happy Birthday GSA!

Though the Girl Scouts of America seem to stay eternally young, this week the organization is celebrating its 75th birthday. In Virginia Beach and across the nation, special events are scheduled to highlight this important occasion in the life of this organization, which remains one of the strongest groups of its kind.

Records show girl scouting was going on in Virginia Beach as early as 1932, when its national convention was held at the Cavalier Hotel. Though no one is sure of the level of local troop involvement at the time, area representatives said it must have been strong enough to support the national delegation.

Today, over 3,750 girls, age five to 17, are involved in the local programs. From the Daisy Girl Scouts (age 5), to the Senior Girl Scouts (ages 14 to 17), the city's troops represent one of the fastest growing groups in the nation.

Anyone who has been involved in Girl Scouts knows it is more than meetings and merit badges. From their very beginning, the Girl Scouts of America has continually tried to be an organization meeting the unique needs of girls. With society as a whole and the role of women changing so rapidly in the last few decades, the Girl Scouts are needed more than ever.

In this area, with so many families moving in and out, being a part of a group that provides continuity is so important. The Girl Scouts offer a way for young girls to get involved with as soon as they arrive, and in these fast paced times, that makes the transition so much easier.

As society and the roles of men and women change, the Girl Scouts of America plays an important role. The young girls of today will be the women leaders of tomorrow and the Girl Scouts provide invaluable training, preparing them for the new roles that lay ahead of them.

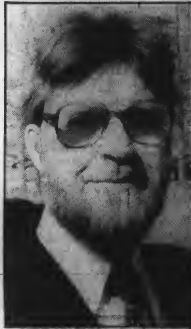

Over and above all of this, the Girl Scouts are fun. Through all the meetings, field trips, camp outs and other activities, friendships grow and lasting memories are made.

Happy Birthday Girl Scouts of America! You don't look a day over 17. — J.D.B.

The Constitution

Madison's legacy

By Lillian B. Youell

Special to The Sun

1787 has been called the most fateful year in our country's history for it was during that year that the United States chose to be a nation, rather than a confederation of states.

Former Chief Justice Warren Burger, now Chairman of the Bicentennial of the Constitution Commission, says "We can best honor our Constitution by giving ourselves a history and civics lesson on its origin and meaning."

What better way to start than by recalling the contributions of our own James Madison, whose birth anniversary will be observed on Monday, March 16.

Lillian Youell is chairman of the city's Bicentennial of the Constitution Commission.

Few are aware of Madison's achievements. When asked to name the Founding Fathers, Americans seldom mention Madison.

Yet it was he above all who shaped our system of government. His thinking and scholarship are reflected time and again in our documents of freedom.

In 1785, he wrote the famous "Memorial and Remonstrance," which persuaded the members of the General Assembly to approve Jefferson's Statute for Religious Freedom.

This was the first time that religious liberty was established by law, and this principle was later made a part of the First Amendment.

The following year, he persuaded the General Assembly to

Remembering Ol' Blue

After graduating from college, it soon became apparent that life was limited somewhat by my lack of transportation. I had survived high school and even college by using my two legs, my ten-speed bike and borrowing a car when absolutely necessary.

Having left the security of campus life, I was now thrust into the world where getting from point 'A' to point 'B' usually meant more than hoofing it to the library or biology building.

With the fear of the unknown seizing me and all my earthly savings in my hands, I headed for the town's car dealers.

I was, like most people I guess, hoping for a used car in perfect condition at a low price. You know, the one owned by the little old lady who only drove it to church and back and never over 35 miles per hour.

Well, I guess the old lady decided to hang on to hers a bit longer because I never found it. What I did find was "Ol' Blue."

"Ol' Blue" was a 1980 Citation with a lot of character. Its previous owner, the Ohio Forestry Department, had allowed a large tree branch to fall on top of it, crushing the roof.

Having replaced it with a landau roof (to cover the imperfections) Ol' Blue was sort of unique. I've only seen one or two other Citations with landau tops and I would guess that their original roofs met a similar fate.

In all honesty I would have to say my car was not too pretty. Also it was sporty. If you accelerated too much over 55 mph, it shook and made a lot of noise.

Because of its accident, the doors didn't close squarely. And though I tried many times I never found how water leaked in around the top of the windshield.

Having bought the car in January, I failed to check the air conditioning system. In June I learned of this fatal mistake. To survive the summer heat, the windows were down everywhere we went.

But, in spite of all its shortcomings, it was my car and I loved it.

What others saw as glaring defects, I saw as unique characteristics. Its creaks and groans was the way it talked to me. I saw its rust spots as signs of maturity.

It took me everywhere. Many important trips were taken with the help of Ol' Blue. When I popped the "big question" to my wife, Ol' Blue took me there. Every mile of our honeymoon travels were made in that car. Vacations, trips and visits were all behind the wheel of Ol' Blue.

But this fall, despite my best efforts, Ol' Blue couldn't pass inspection. Her motor was still sound at 80,000 miles, but her body went.

It was sad to see her go. Taking her to the junkyard was like taking the family dog to the vet to put it to sleep. We didn't want to do it—but it was the best thing to do.

I felt like I was abandoning her. I sat in the driver's seat one last time. I looked over the interior, felt the upholstery, reached for the radio dial I had reached for hundreds of times, gripped the stirring wheel, leaned against the door, adjusted the rearview mirror, said my last goodbye, and walked away.

We now have a much better car. Having a family we opted for a four-door sedan. The air conditioner does work and we wonder how we survived for so long without it.

I've really like our new car but every once in a while, when I see an old Citation, or we decide to drive with the windows down, memories flood back of all the good times I had in Ol' Blue.

Op-Ed

Virginia Beach's local commitment to education — coming up short

The proposed Virginia Beach School Board Budget is getting a great deal of attention. The School Board and the City Council are in the process of deciding on the budget for our school system for the next school year. Our School Board devoted more time to budget review this year than any board in recent history. Despite preoccupation with the details of the current budget, now is a good time to look at historical trends relating to how we fund our schools in Virginia Beach.

A recent Gallup Poll indicates widespread ignorance of how our schools are funded. Many fail to recognize the shrinking federal contribution to education, and many overestimate our local contribution to funding our schools.

The following is a five year budget summary of the contributions of each level of government expressed as a percentage of the Virginia Beach School Board Budget:

Source	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Federal	4%	3%	3%	3%	3%
State	53%	55%	57%	58%	59%
Local	43%	42%	44%	39%	38%

*Includes SDC and Sales Tax revenue.

Assumes restoration of some funds cut in the President's proposed budget.

State support of our schools continues to increase as the local and federal support is shrinking. As the National PTA points out in their newsletter, What's Happening in Washington, the "President's proposals decimate children's programs." Reagan's proposed budget eliminates all funding for vocational education, drastically reduces impact aid, and severely cuts federal funding of handicapped education. Unless Speaker Wright and other friends of education in Congress can

Education

Let's Talk

By

Rob Jones, president

Virginia Beach Education Association

successfully restore funds for education, the federal role will continue to decline.

State funding has increased with the intent that local funds would increase in kind to improve the quality of education in the Commonwealth. Virginia Beach has not responded in kind. Despite a substantial infusion of state funding, we continue to have much larger classes than the rest of the state, and our per pupil expenditure is the lowest in our region except for Portsmouth.

When questioned regarding his biggest disappointment, Dr. E. E. Brickell, our soon to retire superintendent, answered, "Never having quite enough money to do all the things you would like to do for all the students you'd like to do them for. Always sort of coming up a little bit short. I guess maybe some disappointment in having a community with the ability to pay that Virginia Beach has compared with the effort that they're willing to make."

Dr. Brickell's contention that Virginia Beach's effort falls short of its ability is supported by the most current information available from the Virginia Education Association. Of the 135 counties, cities, and towns in Virginia, Virginia Beach ranks 62 in ability and 87 in effort to fund our schools.

The citizens of the next century in Virginia Beach should not be educationally shortchanged. I hope that our elected and appointed officials over the years to come will take action to provide our city with an educational system more in keeping with our city's ability to pay. I hope when our next superintendent leaves he will not echo Dr. Brickell's accurate commentary.

Dow to rise despite muddled reports

Like Ol' Man River, the market just keeps rollin' along.

The Dow industrial average rolled on to more new all time highs this past week before running into some settling ground on Friday. After only seven days of consolidation, following the dramatic January-February upward spiral, the market poised itself to improve and improve it did, advancing 30 points on Wednesday and another 18 on Thursday to finish the week only 24 points from another round number.

So far in 1987, the Dow has crossed through 1900, 2000, 2100 and 2200 with relative ease. It is my view that it will pass through two more by the time June arrives, bringing the blue chip index above 2400.

For the moment though, the big shoot-out comes at the round 2300 level. It may be bigger than the OK corral.

On the news front, the major retail chains reported that February sales were good but not great.

Late February auto sales were up a respectable six percent.

The January index of leading economic indicators fell one percent and January new homes sales were down a slight degree.

More muddling.

On the international scene, the dollar remains on the weak side following a statement from Commerce Undersecretary Ortner that the dollar is still overvalued against the Japanese yen.

President Reagan's speech regarding the Iran controversy seemed to satisfy Wall Street but did not effectively put the situation behind us.

As to this week, we get figures on industrial production, business inventories, and retail sales.

The big question is whether the magic will continue on Wall Street as we continue in a muddling economy. My vote is affirmative.

So, while the heated passion has fled from the canyons of Wall Street, I see nothing wrong with a little honest affection.

The frenetic bull of January and early February may have gone into remission, but we are prepared for another upside episode before spring peeps over the window sill.

call the Annapolis Convention. Although only twelve delegates came from five states, their report set the date and place for the Federal Convention of 1787.

In preparing for that convention, Madison deived into the histories of ancient republics and confederacies. Then he wrote the Virginia Plan, presented to the Convention by Governor Edmund Randolph and considered by some the first draft of the Constitution.

Next, Madison's writings in The Federalist encouraged ratification. It was through his efforts that Virginia narrowly ratified the Constitution in 1788.

Later, he introduced the Bill of Rights in Congress and saw these ten amendments become a part of the Constitution upon ratification by Virginia in December 1791.

These accomplishments have clearly earned Madison the name of "Father of the Constitution."

But that was not the end of his service. Published after his death, the notes Madison kept - on his own initiative and unofficially - have become a national treasure. They are the principal source of knowledge about the debates and proceedings of the convention.

Because of Madison, the State Commission on the Bicentennial of the Constitution can proclaim "The Constitution has Virginia written all over it."

Join Arbor group, get 10 trees

The National Arbor Day Foundation is giving ten free shade trees to Virginia Beach residents who join the nonprofit Foundation during March.

A Sugar Maple, Weeping Willow, Red Oak, Green Ash, Thornless Honeylocust, Pin Oak, Sycamore, Tulip tree, European Mountainash, and Red Maple tree will be given as part of the Foundation's campaign to encourage tree planting.

These trees were selected because they provide flowers, berries and nuts, in addition to shade and beauty, according to John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director.

The Foundation will give the ten free trees to members contributing $10 during March. The six-to-twelve inch trees will be shipped this spring between March 1 and May 31 when conditions are right for planting.

They will be sent with enclosed planting instructions, and are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free by the Foundation.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to:

City Council News

Moss would eliminate from the executive pay plan 12 directors' positions because they do not share the same relationship with Council and because the salary increases would be subject to Council's approval.

These include, directors of Juvenile Probation, Marine Science Museum, Permits and Inspections, Public Information, Research and Strategic Analysis, Pendleton Child Services Center, Housing and Community Development, Emergency Government, Emergency Medical Services, Agriculture, Budget and Evaluation, Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse.

Under the Moss plan, the compensation of the city manager would be determined by a formula based on per capita income and mean family size.

The per capita income and the mean family size would be multiplied by two and a half, giving, in the case of Virginia Beach, a salary of $96,862 to the city manager. Council has the option of voting for less than this and holding the balance for a discretionary cash bonus.

Other executive salaries would be based on percentages of the city manager's salary which would increase with the per capita income of the city.

For instance, the salaries paid to the deputy city attorney, and chief deputy city attorney, would be limited to 90 percent of the city manager's salary; the city deputy attorney, to 75 percent, the real estate assessor to 50 percent and the city clerk to 50 percent.

Under the Moss plan, the city manager's salary for 1987-88 would be $87,175 plus $4,843 for benefits and $4,843 for cash bonus.

Moss produced figures showing that Virginia Beach salaries are higher than those in Fairfax in relation to comparative living costs.

Beach executive salaries under city manager range from 71 percent of the mean housing price to 90 percent of the mean housing price, and from 384 percent to 534 percent of the per capita income, while in Fairfax, the salaries come to 42 to 66 percent of the housing price and 222 to 405 percent of the per capita income.

Hendricks pointed out that jobs in different localities are not identical and that in small organizations people are called upon for a more general performance.

The report recommends that at the executive level salary increases be more performance based. The question is, he said, is how do you go from a system where people expected something every year?

In a report on classified employees other than the executives, Virginia Beach appears to be competitive in both Southern Virginia and the Southeast.

A shortcoming of the city's plan is, according to the report, the city advancement from one level to the next appears to be based on seniority rather than any significant change in job duties.

The city's variable merit plan is not working, the report says, since almost all employees receive the same amount of merit increase.

The report recommends that the city consider eliminating the variable merit increase plan and lump sum merit award program and adopt in its place a two-tiered salary administration plan for its classified employees.

The first tier would be a more traditional step plan applicable to labor and trades, clerical, technical, paraprofessional and protective service positions and the second tier would be an open range salary administration plan with no steps for professionals and middle managers.

The report also recommends: •The city should extend the proposed executive performance appraisal system to cover middle managers, professional and supervising employees.

•The city should consider taking some steps to enhance its benefit programs for both classified and executive employees.

•The city should consider lowering the employees' share of the cost of coverage for health coverage for dependents.

•The city should fully reimburse the cost of regular physical examinations for its executives.

•City executives should be guaranteed severance protection in the form of a minimum of at least three months salary if terminated for the convenience of the government.

•The city should consider supplementing the disability coverage provided to executives to include non-job related disabilities.

•All executive-level employees should be eligible for the maximum vacation allowance rather than having to first service the city 15 or 20 years.

•Some consideration should be given to assisting new incumbents who are not members of the Virginia State Retirement System in rebuilding retirement benefits through such vehicles as a city contribution to individual deferred compensation program or the initiation of a key-person insurance policy.

•Executives should be offered options on benefits with any additional costs derived in part by the individual executive's foregoing all or part of any approved salary increase.

•City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said the city is already doing many of the things recommended in the report.

•In relation to job requirements, Vice Mayor Meyers Oberndorf said that when Muehlenbeck was hired, the city had a $28 million deficit in the budget. He was hired to remove that deficit, which he did, she said.

City Celebration

25th anniversary of "Norwegian Lady" to be honored by city ceremony

On Saturday, March 28, starting at 2 p.m., Virginia Beach will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the oceanfront's "Norwegian Lady."

This statue, erected in Virginia Beach in 1962 at 25th and Atlantic Avenue, is a replica of a wooden figurehead washed ashore in 1891 following a boating tragedy off the coast.

The "Norwegian lady," as the statue is known, has been preserved as a memorial to all men of the sea by the Ladies Auxiliary to the Virginia Beach Borough Volunteer Fire Department for the past 25 years.

The ceremony will feature music by the Atlantic Fleet Band. The Virginia Beach Fire Department Honor Guard and amphibious LARC vehicle will also take part, and Vice Mayor Meyers Oberndorf will relate this history of the "Norwegian Lady."

The public is invited, and those who attend will receive free admission to the Maritime Museum on the day of the event.

side High School. After being there for 10 years, Lankford went to Green Run High School when it opened in 1979. He said he has enjoyed the "wonderful challenge" of building a new program. Even with the school going through many growing pains, he thinks the staff and students still retain "very much a family environment."

As with most new schools, the growth meant portable units for classrooms and sharing the equipment. "We have all had to cooperate with the facilities," he said.

Recently, Lankford has been involved in a project bringing together his teaching profession and his involvement with the Land House.

"It is really very exciting," he said about his work on an English literature textbook aimed at the high school/junior college level.

"It is a way of going back in time," he said, "to the neoclassical period."

Though he was not at liberty to discuss the book project in depth, he said the book may be in print by next year, and he said, "we're going to tackle the whole realm" of English literature.

Lankford hoped that all Virginia Beach residents appreciate the Land House museum. "It is exciting to see the Francis Land House alive and well," he said. Not only is it a place where the mayor of the city can welcome visiting dignitaries, it is a tie to our beginnings."

Virginia Beach Pops concert to feature piano competition

The Virginia Beach Pops will feature the winner of its National Piano Competition on Sunday, March 15 at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. at the Pavilion Theater.

The Grieg Concerto in A Minor is the competition work to be presented in the middle portion of this orchestral concert. The winner will be selected from five finalists who will compete in front of a panel of five judges two days before the concert.

Walter Noona will direct the orchestra in the "Overture to Cats" by Rice and Webber, "Egyptian March" by Strauss, and Grofé's "On The Trail" from the Grand Canyon Suite.

In the final portion of the concert patrons can help celebrate St. Patrick's Day with a medley of Irish songs. There will be several selections featuring the brass section of the "Pops" and the Hampton Roads premiere of "Skyline," a new McGovern arrangement. Tickets range from $9 to $15 and may be purchased at the Pavilion Box Office.

Call 428-7677 for more information.

Oscar Award winner John Green to lead concert March 15

Composer, conductor, pianist John Green will lead The Virginia Symphony Pops in a concert on Sunday, March 15, at 7:30 p.m. at the Pavilion Convention Center.

As General Music Director and Executive-in-Charge-of-Music for 10 years at MGM Studios, Green has received 14 Academy Award nominations and has won five Oscars. His winners were "Easter Parade," "An American in Paris," "West Side Story," "Oliver," and "The Merry Wives of Windsor Overture."

Tickets are available at the Pavilion box office.

Annual national piano competition sponsored by Arts and Humanities

The National Piano Competition sponsored annually by the Arts and Humanities Commission of Virginia Beach will take place on Friday, March 13.

Five finalists will perform the Grieg Concerto in A Minor. The competition will take place at Clifford Herzer's penthouse suite in the Mayflower-Seaside Towers from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The five young artists are James J. March, Sioux City, Iowa; Tannis Gibson, Charlottesville, Virginia; Liani Rose, Baltimore, Maryland; Christine Fessmeyer-Hill, South Euclid, Ohio; and Dennis Keith Daniel of Statesville, North Carolina.

Judges for this event will be Clifford Herzer, Diane Goldsmith, Jane Belkov Kaplan, Russell Stanger, and Allen Shaffer. The winner will be announced at Maestro Walter Noona's home at 5:30 p.m. on the day of the contest. The winning pianist will be awarded $500 and the runner up will receive $250. The winner will perform with the Virginia Beach Pops Orchestra at 2:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 15 as a guest soloist on the Subscription Concerts.

For further information call J. L. Kreger 428-7677.

Golden Years

Virginia Beach senior athletes go for the gold at the 1987 Golden Olympics

Registration is now open for Virginia Beach senior athletes who'll be "going for the gold" in the 1987 Virginia Recreation and Park Society's Golden Olympics this May.

More than 600 Virginians are expected to compete in the sports and recreation events, scheduled May 28 to 31 at Lynchburg

College. Schedules and registration forms are available at local Recreation and Park departments or by writing the Golden Olympics, P. O. Box 2774, Lynchburg, Va. 24501. Information may also be picked up at branch offices of the two sponsoring companies—Bank of Virginia; and Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Virginia.

Competitors age 55 and over will vie for gold, silver and bronze medals in more than 25 sports categories. Among the events are tennis, golf, running, walking, swimming, cycling, softball hit and throw, basketball, ten pin bowling, track and field, riflery, table tennis, jump rope, and badminton. Less strenuous activities include billiards, bridge, canasta, checkers, croquet, fish casting, frisbee throw, horseshoes, and miniature golf.

Virginia's 9th annual Golden Olympics has been chosen as the official qualifying site for the first U.S. National Senior Olympics June 27 to July 2 in St. Louis. More than 4,000 participants age 55 and older from throughout the U.S. are expected to compete, including top senior athletes from Virginia.

Tax help available for elderly Virginia Beach residents

Senior citizens in Virginia Beach who have questions regarding special tax provisions for the elderly may find help in a special "Congressional Tax Guide for Older Americans."

The guide, prepared by the House Select Committee on Aging, is available to area senior citizens on a first-come, first-served basis.

To obtain a copy of the Congressional Tax Guide for Older Americans, U.S. Representative Owen Pickett said interested persons should call or write his constituent service office in Virginia Beach. It is located at 2710 Virginia Beach Boulevard, Virginia Beach, 23452, or call 486-3710.

Senior citizens and all other taxpayers can also receive assistance by calling the Internal Revenue Service at its toll free number, 1-800-424-1040.

Caregiving training course offered by Comprehensive Mental Health Services

Virginia Beach Comprehensive Mental Health Services will sponsor a free training course for individuals interested in becoming caregivers in the Respite Care for its elderly program.

To qualify for the training, participants must be a resident of Virginia Beach and 18 years of age or older. Classes will be held March 23 through 27, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Upon completion of the 25 hours of training, caregivers will be assigned to Virginia Beach families to aid them in caring for their elderly family members. Hours are flexible and caregivers will be paid.

To receive an application or additional information, contact Pat Craven, respite care coordinator, at 497-0687.

Free blood pressure clinics offered through city Health Department

Crime Solvers seek murderer

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is seeking information about the Feb. 25 murder of a 57-year-old Virginia Beach woman. Up to a $1,000 reward will be paid if a call to Crime Solvers leads investigators to an arrest.

At 8:45 a.m., Thursday, Feb.

26, the body of Velma Peregory was found murdered in her apartment in the 3500 block of Francis Land Court in the Rose Hall complex.

Police believe Peregory, who had been shot several times, was killed between 8 and 11 a.m., Wednesday morning.

There were no signs of forced entry into the apartment and no motive has been established for the killing.

Anyone with information about this murder is urged to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Rewards are also paid for information about any crime committed in Virginia Beach.

Callers are assigned confidential code numbers and are never required to reveal their name or testify in court to collect a reward.

Free family counseling services offered

The city of Virginia Beach offers free marriage and family crisis counseling, and support and custody mediation services to residents each week.

Coordinated by the Family Counseling Unit of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court, the program aims to help families work together to increase communication skills and coping mechanisms.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays. The program is located at 397 Little Neck Road, Building 3300, Suite 200.

Law librarians Terry Mathieson (L) and Bob Miller doing research at the Public Law Library at the Municipal Center

City of Virginia Beach
Public Information Office

Is someone considered a "peeping Tom" if they peer through windows during daylight hours? How old must someone be to babysit?

Answers to these and numerous other questions of a legal nature can be found at the Robert S. Wahab, Jr. Public Law Library located on Princess Anne Road at the Municipal Center.

"This is the only public law library in Virginia Beach, and anybody can use our services," says Bob Miller, a law librarian.

The small reference facility began as a reading room before evolving into a public library in 1972. It is named after the now-retired circuit court judge who spent a lot of time using its resources when he was on the bench, according to the law library's information specialist, Terry Mathieson.

Last year, visits to the law library numbered 17,000. More than 85 percent of the requests for information were filled and the rest were referred to other sources.

Reference materials include legal encyclopedias and form books, as well as the code books for the United States, Virginia, North Carolina and Virginia Beach, the latter of which list all the laws and regulations used to govern each domain.

Laymen as well as lawyers are invited to browse through any of the materials during weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"At present, about 75 percent of our usage comes from members of the legal profession —lawyers, legal secretaries, court reporters, and judges," said Miller. "Other visitors include the general public, their topics of interest ranging from domestic relations to traffic laws."

He and Mathieson are always ready to lend a helping hand in finding the right source of information. "If we don't have what someone needs we can usually call around and find it somewhere," he said. "We have a good working relationship with the law libraries in Norfolk, Portsmouth and Richmond."

The two staff members are careful to point out that they do not offer legal advice or interpretation.

"Basically, all of our materials are of the non-interpretive type," says Miller. "That is, they are strictly fact-oriented."

Commentary, however, such as magazine articles or editorials regarding certain court cases can be found through Bayside Library's Reference Division.

The legal reference materials cannot be removed from the Library, but once the correct material is found, patrons can make photocopies on site.

"This is the only public law library in Virginia Beach, and anybody can use our services." — Law Librarian Bob Miller of the Robert S. Wahab, Jr. Public Law Library located at the Municipal Center.

"Ten cents a page is the only cost involved in using our services," says Miller.

Last year, visits to the law library numbered 17,000. More than 85 percent of the requests for information were filled, according to Miller, and the rest were referred to other sources.

Library staff also does ready reference over the phone. Questions are called in to 427-4419. If the reference is too lengthy or difficult to understand, copies can be sent to the caller's closest library branch.

And in answer to the questions in the beginning of this article —

Virginia Beach Code, Section 23-45 Peeping Toms — If any person shall enter upon the property of another, in the nighttime, and secretly or furtively peep through or attempt to peep into or through, or spy through, a window, door or other aperture of any building, structure or other enclosure of any nature occupied or intended for occupancy as a dwelling, whether or not such building, structure or enclosure is permanently situated or transportable, and whether or not such occupancy is permanent or temporary, such person shall be guilty of a Class I Misdemeanor.

Babysitting — According to Mathieson, there is no legal age required for babysitters. Instead, each individual situation is up to both sets of parents — the babysitter's and the child's.

"Working here is truly a study in human nature," says Mathieson, who has been on the staff since 1975. "Dealing with people and doing the research is always interesting!"

"A labor of love"

Local dance company is working hard for this weekend's performance at Pavilion.

By James D. Barr
Staff Writer

As artistic director of the Virginia Beach Music in Motion Dance Company, Darlene Kelly calls her efforts to bring dance into the forefront of the local art world as "a labor of love."

"It is a labor of love for anyone who wants to be involved," said the Larkspur resident. "It takes such a big effort not only physically, but mentally too."

Along with the dance company's founder, Judith Hatcher Boyd, Kelly has been spending the last few years shaping the 17-member troupe into one of Tidewater's best.

Incorporated in 1979 at the Children's Dance Theatre, the company became part of the nationally syndicated Music in Motion in 1985. With dancers at apprentice, junior and senior levels, this company promotes itself as a place where young people who are looking at dancing as career can really see what it is like.

"It is really important to the local area," she said, "because not only does it help the kids who are involved but we are also doing something for the community."

Overall, she said, the company's goal is to offer quality performances. "It is important for the people of Virginia Beach and even visitors to see that there are artistic endeavors going on," she said.

But she knows reaching the goal means a lot of hard work for her and everyone involved in the company.

Body stretching, dance routines and choreography. Practice, practice, and more practice. This level of commitment translates into spending six evenings a week in the studio.

"We are primarily an adult dance company with youthful support," said Kelly. And with members' ages ranging from 9 to 38, schedules must be arranged around school and work.

All the members are students of the dance school, she said, and as students, are expected to take classes which involve a tuition cost. The minimum number for every member is three ballet classes, one jazz class and one modern dance class each week.

2,000 people expected to attend fundraising benefits to build homes for troubled youths, battered wives

The tickets are all printed and the place and time have been sent. Now, the Virginia Beach Ruritan Club, the city's Sheriff's Department and the Virginia Beach/Chesapeake Zonta Club are hoping 2,000 people will come to their first annual Food Fest.

Jack Dewan, a Ruritan Club member, said he is "not really sure how much" food he will have to buy to feed the anticipated crowd but he estimates that 500 pounds of chicken and another 500 pounds of pig should do the trick.

Along with gallons of beans, tubs of cole slaw and piles of hush puppies, there should be enough good food to satisfy everyone.

two ahead of time to get everything ready," he said. Once the charcoal is hot and the food is ready to cook, the Ruritan Club is going to bring out their "secret weapon" — a special barbecue sauce prepared by club member Darrel Hughes.

"It is a bought sauce," he said, "and I doctor it up." To cover the half-ton of meat Hughes figures he will have to come up with 10 gallons of his secret formula.

Lt. William A. Nixon of the Sheriff's Department and a Ruritan Club member said he has tasted the sauce and described it as "out of this world."

All these efforts, planned for Wednesday, April 1, from 2 to 6 p.m., at the Camp Pendleton Military Reservation on General Booth Boulevard, are for a good cause.

Proceeds from the $10 a ticket event will be used to benefit the Ruritan Club's long range objective to establish a ranch/farm for troubled juveniles and the Zonta Club's efforts to open a home for abused spouses (male and female) in the Virginia Beach/Chesapeake area.

Nixon said the idea of a ranch/farm for troubled juveniles came from seeing a similar project in Florida. His work with the court system through the Sheriff's Department brings him in contact

$30 million over 6-year period

Four city road projects to be submitted at VDOT hearing

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

The city of Virginia Beach will submit four additional road projects totalling $30 million to the Virginia Department of Transportation at its pre-allocation hearing on Wednesday, March 25, at 10 a.m. in the Suffolk District Office.

Public Works Director C. Oral Lambert Jr. said that the State urban engineer has advised the city that the Department is in a position to consider additional projects from the city amounting to approximately $30 million over the six-year planning period.

Lambert cautioned that the projects are tentative because the scope and cost of several projects already on the list will exceed present estimates, cutting into the $30 million. Also, he said, the amount of money that will be available is uncertain.

If money is not available for all the projects, he said, the city has the option to remove projects.

The new projects are Landstown Road from Holland to Princess Anne Roads, $6.3 million; Salem Road, from Ferrell Parkway to Lynnhaven Parkway, $2.8 million; South Plaza Trail from Princess Anne Road to Independence Boulevard, $8.4 million; and Military Highway from city line to city line.

When the General Assembly increased taxes last fall to expedite the State's highway program, Council indicated that it wanted to fully fund the road projects already on the six-year improvement program, deciding to wait until it learned how much money would be available before submitting additional projects.

Lambert also said that the Military Highway project would tie in with a Norfolk project.

Of the original projects in the six-year program, Lambert said that construction of First Colonial Road, Phase III may be affected by the Southeastern Expressway project.

In answer to a question from Councilwoman Reba McClannan, he also said that Princess Anne Road from Ferrell Parkway to Landstown Road is scheduled for construction in three years. Money for the project is budgeted in the six-year plan, he said, but it will take three years to get the project under way.

Rezoning request denied by City Council after little debate

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

With an army of area residents at its back, City Council shot down a rezoning request that would have permitted a shopping center on a portion of Bayville Farms property in the Bayside Borough.

Although Bayside Borough Councilman John Perry moved for approval of the requested rezoning, he won over only one other Council member, Albert Balko. The nine other members voted against the rezoning without making any remarks except for Councilman John D. Moss who refuted one of Perry's statements.

Perry said he received "so many letters" from the community citing traffic, noise and visual pollution of the proposed project, that he did a little survey. From his survey, he concluded that the traffic was not as heavy as the staff figures indicated and that the visual and noise pollution would not be sufficient to disturb the community.

Moss refuted a statement of Perry's that commercial traffic would impact the area less than the residential traffic which would be generated if the property were developed as it is presently zoned.

Council granted the application of Bayville Farms Associates for a closure of a portion of Five Forks Road which

City Fire Department warns: fireplace ashes are dangerous

By John M. Farrell
Office of Public Information
City of Virginia Beach

It happens at least once every winter. And, almost always, it's after a bright sunny day, one resembling springtime weather.

It's the arrival of a cold front which sends hundreds of Virginia Beach residents running to use their fireplace or woodburning stove for additional heat.

But lighting a stove or fireplace brings more than just a warm glow. With it comes the responsibility of carefully disposing of ashes and coals.

And that hasn't been the case lately. According to Fire Inspector Joseph P. Long of Virginia Beach Fire Department, people are causing severe damage to their homes by storing hot ashes in flammable containers.

"People use almost anything in sight to store ashes in, from plastic buckets to paper and plastic bags—even wooden crates," Long said. "This is asking for fire."

And Virginia Beach has had a lot of that this winter.

"We average about a call per shift," Long said.

To date, the Fire Department has responded to more calls this season than in recent years.

Most of the fires have been started by people who thought they were placing completely cooled ashes into plastic buckets, paper bags or other flammable containers on their porches, inside their garages or outside beside their homes, Long said.

But they were wrong. Actually, they were putting hot embers, which were insulated by ashes and could remain hot for several days, into the flammable containers.

Eventually, the containers reached burning point and ignited.

To avoid that, Long suggested people begin using metal containers to store their ashes, place their containers far away from their homes, and smother the ashes and embers with water.

"It's a common sense problem," Long said.

Not applying common sense has caused several homeowners thousands of dollars in repair.

Food Fest support

It is easy to identify a need. It is another thing to do something about it.

Through the combined efforts of the Virginia Beach Ruritan Club, the Virginia Beach/Chesapeake Zonta Club and the city's Sheriff's Department, the first annual Food Fest will be held on Wednesday, April 1 to raise money for two much needed projects in the community.

The Virginia Beach Ruritan Club wants to help troubled juveniles. It recognized that many young people were being lost in the court system. The club's goals is to establish a ranch/farm for these young people — an environment where responsibility and close supervision can be given as an alternative to the existing system of youth detention centers. Caught in a lifestyle leading nowhere, this ranch may give them an opportunity to break the cycle.

The Zonta Club is well on its way to establishing a place for battered and abused spouses. With the Norfolk facility so overloaded with cases that they must turn away, the work of the Zonta Club is welcome.

Both of these private sector efforts are for worthwhile causes.

The Sheriff's Department is assisting these efforts, volunteering its manpower. As civil authorities involved in the court system, the department sees many people who would benefit by these projects. They know their time is well spent in helping with this Food Fest.

Now it is the community's turn.

The organizers of this event are hoping for 2,000 people to show up. At $10 per person, that would mean $20,000 would be raised with all the funds going toward these worthy causes.

What could be a better way to help them out than to spend the afternoon of April 1 feasting on barbecued pig, chicken, cole slaw, hush puppies and more. You can eat to your hearts content and know that your money is going to two much needed community causes.—J.D.B.

Dancing uplift

Where most art is represented by paint on canvas, sculpted stone or various other images, dance is music in motion.

This weekend's performance by the Music in Motion Dance Company will cap many long hours of practice for the local troupe.

As with most any endeavor, if you want it done well you must be ready to work for it. Those who aspire to dance professionally, know the rigors of this art. It requires the endurance of ultra aerobics, the flexibility of a gymnast and the concentration required of any serious competitor.

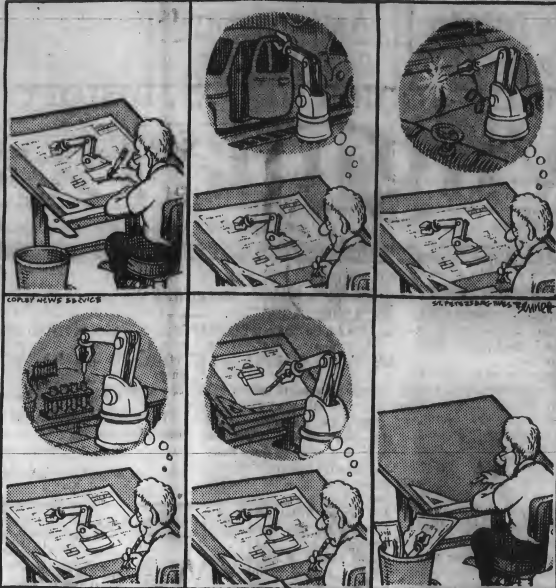

Most are willing to endure some sort of self-sacrifice to attain a desired end, but in the case of dance, it takes years of hard work before the work bears fruit. Classes, practice, preparations for performances, all add up leaving little time for much else. Dancers must love (i.e., eat, sleep and dream) dancing.

Most are willing to endure some sort of self-sacrifice to attain a desired end, but in the case of dance, it takes years of hard work before the work bears fruit. Classes, practice, preparations for performances, all add up leaving little time for much else. Dancers must love (i.e., eat, sleep and dream) dancing.

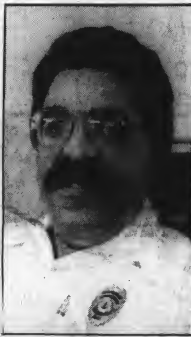

Artistic dancing may not be highly regarded by some people. This attitude is soon dislodged when it is realized how much skill it takes to perform as they do.

The result is beneficial to the entire community. The focused lives of those in the Music in Motion Dance Company bring dividends to the performers through a sense of accomplishment and others can enjoy the fruit of their labors through their performances.

It may seem like the one performance this weekend will have little impact on the community, but when an organization like Music in Motion sets such high goals, though it may take awhile, the entire community is lifted by its efforts.—J.D.B.

Citizenship

DAR welcomes new citizens

At the March Naturalization Court held at the Walter E. Hoffman Court House, members of the Lynnhaven Parish Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution said "Welcome" to the 80 new American citizens and presented them with American flags. Assisting those studying for American citizenship has been a long standing commitment of the DAR through the free distribution of the DAR Manual for Citizenship and helping with Americanism classes.

Dr. G. William Whitehurst, former Second District Congressman, was invited by Mrs. Willard Striffler, chairman, to address the new citizens. His talk focused on the rights and responsibilities granted by the U.S. Constitution and the importance of the bi-centennial celebration of this document.

Put ban on bird shoots

Editor:

Every Labor Day the town of Hgins, Pennsylvania has conducted a public, live bird shoot as a fundraising event.

Thousands of birds are trucked in to be released and killed by 300 shooters (some of them hunters) from all over the country.

Eight thousand birds were killed or crippled last year.

To me, a skeet shooting contest would be more appropriate and would humanely save the lives of thousands of birds each year.

Legislation to ban live bird shoots should be enacted.

Laws of nature in social realm?

Unconsciously, people know that the law of gravity is always at work. You don't have to "believe" it will work for gravity to operate. It is a fact of life.

If you step out of a third floor window, you risk bodily injury. That simple experiment clearly shows the direct consequence of trying to work against gravity, a law of nature.

Most people look around them and see the way the universe operates. We take for granted that water flows downhill, the invariability of the seasons and the movement of the stars in the heavens.

While discussions of Newtonian physics, electromagnetism and neurobiology may seem like a foreign language, their principles come into play, whether we understand them or not, in our daily lives.

The cars we drive, the stores we cook on, the structure of the buildings we live in, all operate according to certain laws of nature. These are unchangeable rules. If you try to live your life and disregard these rules you run the risk of the negative consequences.

What I have mentioned so far are the more obvious laws. And just as these laws of nature apply in all situations, so there are laws operating in the social realm.

Why then do people try to live their lives as if there were no absolutes in society, no social standards by which we must live? I see obvious examples in everyday life which should make people aware of the very real restrictions which should be heeded.

Why then do people try to live their lives as if there were no absolutes in society, no social standards by which we must live? I see obvious examples in everyday life which should make people aware of the very real restrictions which should be heeded.

The most current problem of Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) points out the very serious consequences of defying the age old rule of fidelity within a monogamous, heterosexual marriage. There is the option of celibacy, but it seems obvious from daily news accounts that those who lead sexually promiscuous lives increase their chances of contracting not just AIDS but all types of sexually transmitted diseases.

More, and more people disregard the rules that apply to marriage itself. The "sanctity of marriage" is almost archaic in this day and age, but as people ignore the importance of the family and the divorce rate climbs, there seems to be a link to the continued disintegration of society.

The difference between the scientific laws of nature and the social laws of nature is the time lapse between the cause and effect. In science, the results are usually measurable and immediate. In society, the effects of breaking the rules are not as quickly evidenced.

While you can't study the laws of the social realm as precisely as those in the field of science, it seems to me that the world would be a better place to live if people would recognize the reality of the laws of nature that apply to the way we operate on the social level.

Contributions of women in U.S. history highlighted in March

This week's column was submitted by VBEE Vice-President Claire Polley.

Nearly two-thirds of the world's teachers are women. During the month of March, the contributions of these women, and "their grandmothers and sisters," will be highlighted in classrooms around America.

Women's History Month honors women who "have contributed to America's shared history by living out their lives in ways both grandly eloquent and steadfastly ordinary."

The idea of celebrating women's history with an annual observance is relatively new to this country. It was during the 1960s that women's history days began being observed and in 1978, a week-long observance was publicized by the National Women's History Project of Santa Rosa, Calif.

The governors of 24 states and the District of Columbia declared women's history week celebration in 1981. Then in 1982, the U.S. Congress passed a joint resolution making the National Women's History Week an annual observance to be celebrated during the second week in March.

This year, for the first time, the celebration has been expanded to include the entire month of March.

This year, for the first time, the celebration has been expanded to include the entire month of March.

Education

Teachers at the elementary and secondary level will give special emphasis to the role of women in shaping the world in which we live. Students will be assigned research reports, projects, and taught how women's roles have influenced the country and how those roles have been influenced by the events of history.

The students will have to dig deep to find the information.

According to the National Women's History Project, less than 11 percent of the content in the most often used textbooks deals with women. A study by two American University professors found that in the books that have won the Caldicott Medal, for every girl depicted, there were 10 boys.

Grants by the Rockefeller Foundation and Women's Studies Center at Duke University, among others, are working to change this.

Women are an integral part of history and women's issues need to be a part of the curriculum. It is important to expand history as it has been traditionally taught, emphasizing the political, military, and economic events of the time to include the roles of women, people of color, and the mass of ordinary citizens.

By doing this, we can give students "an understanding and appreciation of American history that lasts longer and has more relevance to life."

Students need to perceive the contribution of all its citizens to the development and success of our country. They also need to recognize the responsibility to gain equal access to social, political, and economic rights to all its members.

We salute the women of our profession and join in celebrating Women's History Month.

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Babysitters should be fire conscious

The next time you go out and leave your children with a babysitter, you should discuss several safety tips with them so if an emergency arises, they will be better prepared.

The 911 emergency phone number should be placed on or near the telephone so it can be easily seen. In an emergency, people actually forget where they live, which brings us to the next tip.

Write down your street address and phone number and put it by the telephone. You may drop by any fire station in Virginia Beach and pick up several 911 adhesive stickers. These stickers are free.

Advise your babysitter not to cook while you are gone. This eliminates one potential problem.

The fireplace should not be used that night either.

Do leave the phone number to where you can be reached and also phone numbers of a close relative and a neighbor. If you can't be reached, the babysitter has two additional phone numbers for advice or help.

Ask if your babysitter has taken a cardiopulmonary resuscitation course (CPR). If your babysitter has a valid CPR card, then it's worth paying a slightly higher hourly wage for the peace of mind.

Place a flashlight on the dining room table and point it out to the babysitter so in case the lights go out, no one will be injured in the dark looking for it.

Tell the babysitter to never open the front door to a stranger. Please follow these safety tips and make your family fire safe.

Triple witching hour at hand

Having escaped back to back months with Friday the 13th with no major market correction, Virginia Beach investors could begin to feel invincible as we continue merrily down the yellow brick road.

However, I remain encouraged with the breadth and the ongoing ocean of liquidity.

As we head into the final weeks of the first quarter, the upside has become a little more difficult. The DOW industrial average has spent the last two weeks probing up to that troublesome 2300 number and finding that this one is not the piece of cake as were the other four this year.

On a very short term basis, the time may be approaching to give the bad guys a break, just to keep them in the game. A few days of rest and rehabilitation and some correction will put the blue chip index in better shape to attack the illusive round number of 2300.

Several of the leading market timing gurus have expressed a word of caution about the short term prospects of the market. No one has indicated anything beyond a short term hiccup, but with the DOW up 380 points from bottom to top this year and the first triple witching hour for 1987 arriving this Friday, we have the ingredients for computerized programs and market volatility.

Also, as the quarter comes to a close, money managers will begin to dress up their portfolios for their quarterly reviews. The DOW might be hesitant, but there is vitality in the broad list.

Periodic shake-outs are inevitable, but I doubt that any major correction is at hand.

Just think happy thoughts - like window dressing. There is another round number in your future.

Though there are other dance schools and companies in the area, Kelly thinks Music in Motion is a little bit different. "I think we're more rounded," she said, "in the aspect that we don't just offer ballet, not just jazz, and not just modern dance, but all three."

Though she knows not everyone has the talent or the opportunity to dance professionally, Kelly thinks this program gives young people an opportunity to work hard at making a career out of dance.

"We have several students that have graduated from here, in a sense, and gone on to bigger things," she said. "One girl got a full scholarship to study dance in college."

Right now, Kelly said that she and the rest of the company are working very hard for their "Cherry Blossom Time" performance on March 21 at the Pavilion. While everyone in the Lappy Meredith, a coordinator of fire education services, added, "apathy is the biggest problem. Everyone thinks 'it can't happen to me.' So they begin to take everything for granted and stop being cautious. Such complacency only allows the problem to continue."

Greta Waitz, Sweetpea Whitaker comes to the Beach for sportsfest

National and international celebrities in a variety of sports will be in Virginia Beach this week to participate in the First Annual Shamrock Sportsfest, according to the Virginia Beach Convention Bureau.

International track star Greta Waitz, who set the world record in the 8K (five mile) last year in the Shamrock 8K, will be back to defend her title at 10:15 a.m. Saturday, March 21, according to Shamrock Marathon and 8K organizer Jerry Bocrie.

Olympic and now professional boxing star, Pernell Sweetpea Whitaker, will give an exhibition at the Shamrock Trade Show in the Virginia Beach Pavilion at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, March 21.

Coming to Virginia Beach from Michigan will be Steve Landick, one of the nation's best known canoe racers, to compete in the Shamrock Canoe Race, beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday, March 22, at the Owl's Creek boat ramp. Landick won the Ultimate Canoe Race, 28,000 miles up the Grand Canyon.

The Sportsfest kicks off on Wednesday, March 18, at 5 p.m. with the Shamrock Stride, a 5K walk, and concludes Sunday afternoon with canoe races and a windsurfing regatta. Events have been planned for Hampton Roads residents and visitors coming from throughout the mid-Atlantic area to participate.

The full schedule of events follows, with contacts.

"We see so many (troubled juveniles) go through court but can't do anything for them," said Nixon. The club hopes this project will be a way to help.

He said they have started the project "from scratch" and hope to find others who are sympathetic to the cause.

As it is now, he said, the kids go from bad to worse. Their goal is to have a place where there will be better supervision than in the home where the problem started.

Ruth Hodges Smith, who organized the local chapter of the Zonta Club, said she is very encouraged about the upcoming event. The 31-member Zonta Club for women, organized along the lines of Kiwanis and Rotary, is hoping to raise funds for abused spouses.

She said that the club's first project was to help a facility for battered women in Norfolk. When that was finished, they saw a need to have a similar facility in the Virginia Beach/Chesapeake area.

Since then, Smith said the Zonta Club has contacted an architect, a builder, a plumber and an electrician who are willing to donate their time to build this shelter.

"All we need now is the property," said Smith.

McCutcheon

Folk singer to appear at VWC as part of college's spring series

Virginia Wesleyan College will present folk singer John McCutcheon in concert on Friday, March 20, from 1:30 to 3 p.m. in the college chapel. The concert, part of the college's spring series of special events, is free and open to the public.

Because of limited seating, reservations must be made by calling 461-3232. McCutcheon is perhaps best known for his part in repopularizing the once nearly extinct hammer dulcimer. Recognized as one of the world's top players of the great instrument, his recordings, master classes, and live performances are in great demand.

denied the property turned down for rezoning.

Council denied the application of the Bayville Farms Association for rezoning from R-6 Residential District to B-2 Community-Business District on property at the southwest corner of Shore Drive and Baylake Drive.

The parcel contains 11.789 acres.

Although Council members made few remarks, speakers on both sides went on for more than an hour and a half.

Grover Wright, attorney for the applicant, said the rezoning was being asked to help finance a farm operation which does not carry itself.

He said the Burroughs and Tyler families have owned the 600 acres there since 1919 and that Mabel B. Tyler resides in the manor house built in 1824.

He said that the owners dedicated a permanent easement of 300 acres to the Virginia Out-door Foundation and the Virginia Landmark Association, and part of the property was purchased by the city for Bayville Park.

He said that on a five-mile stretch on Shore Drive along which Bayville Farms is located, no other piece of property remains that is not zoned commercial except for Little Creek housing.

Of the planning staff argument that the site is not at a major intersection, Wright said that neither were Lynnhaven Mall and Haygood Shopping Center when they were built.

He said the applicants offered proffers and deed restrictions to provide that no place on the south side of Shore Drive will have commercial development; that the height of buildings will be restricted to one story; that cuts will be limited to two on Shore Drive and two on Baylake Drive; that the property will be developed as a uniform parcel and not subdivided and will have no conditional uses, no beer taverns or night clubs; 30 percent more land in the interior will be landscaped than is required; and a 30-foot buffer will remain in the rear; a 20-foot buffer will go up on Shore Drive, and lower storm water retention methods will be used.

SALUTING THE AGRI-INDUSTRY

Ag Week observed

Don't forget about farmers

By Thomas H. Baker,
Extension Agent, Virginia Beach
Department of Agriculture

Some 50,000 acres of our city's land area is devoted to farming. Virginia Beach's Agriculture Industry contributed nearly $70 million to Tidewater's economy in 1985 (the last year for which complete records are available). Hogs and pigs lead all other crops and livestock as the city's most important agricultural commodity; indeed, Virginia Beach continues to lead the state in hog production. Our other major crops include soybeans, corn, wheat, small fruits and vegetables. Virginia Beach's 230 farms are operated by some 60 commercial farmers.

Nationally, total agricultural production is more than twice the level of 1930, even though the agricultural resource base has changed little. Today the typical farm worker supplies enough food and fiber for 80 people (21 of which live abroad). One hour of farm labor yields 16 times as much food and other crops now as 65 years ago.

Of the $312 billion spent for food by American consumers in 1985, the farmer received only about 31%, or $98 billion. The remaining $214 billion went to others in our farm-to-you food system, including those who work in assembling, inspecting, grading, storing, processing, packaging, transporting, wholesaling, and retailing agricultural products.

In a city the size of Virginia Beach, with probably more grocery stores than commercial farmers, it may be all too easy to forget about the important foundation of our complex food and fiber economy. Think of the farmer during this Virginia Agriculture Week. With apologies to the popular farm truck bumper sticker, "Don't forget about the farmer with your mouth full."

Virginia Cooperative Extension Service is an Educational Service of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Virginia's Land-Grant Institutions, with U.S. Department of Agriculture and Local Governments Cooperating. Programs, activities, and employment opportunities are available to all people regardless of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, handicap, or political affiliation.

Serene

Few views can match the serenity of a pastoral farm setting, such as Bayville Farms in Virginia Beach.

Merrifields Garden Club meets; gardening tips; bird of the month named

The monthly meeting of the Merrifields Garden Club is scheduled for Monday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m. at Coleman Nursery. Calvin Cupit will speak on gardening.

Exhibits and arrangements for judging will include a floral arrangement design using all greens, depicting the theme "Touch of Blarney," and an open class. The horticulture category will include an outside specimen (limit three stems), an interior plant and a collection specimen (all one variety).

The horticultural hint for the month — Prune and fertilize roses. Establish a monthly feeding schedule for the heavy eaters. Spray roses with a fungicide or insecticide to destroy winter carryovers. Dig up dandelions because they rob soil of iron and copper. Till the garden if it is not a raised bed. Plant cool weather crops.

The bird of the month is the yellow-shafted flicker (Colaptes auratus). It is common in open country near large trees. Underneath the bird's wings and tail feathers is the distinctive color which graduates from golden to orange, or salmon in hybrids. A black "mustache" is present over the bird's beak except in adult females. The nape of the yellow-shafted flicker's neck is always red. The call of all flickers is a loud repeated "flick" or "flicker."

The garden club reminds Merrifield residents that March 20 is the first day of spring and they can do their part in coloring the scenery by planting flowers.

Prices Up

Hog breeding, pig inventory as low as ever in the state

The breeding hogs and pig inventory in the state, and the nation, has reached the lowest it has been since records have been kept.

That also means that the prices hog farmers are getting is the best in a long time, said Virginia Tech Extension animal scientist, Charles R. Cooper.

Virginia had cash receipts of $67,292,000 on hogs in 1985, and ranked 19 out of 50 states which produce hogs.

Professional Bowlers!

Tour visits Tidewater

April 10, 11, and 12 will be exciting days for the sport of bowling in Tidewater. Princess Lanes Bowling Center will be hosting Tidewater's first, in many years, Professional Bowlers Regional Tour stop.

Over 1,000 national and regional professional bowlers will be invited to compete. The first squad of bowlers will begin singles competition Saturday April 11 at 8 a.m. and will bowl throughout the day. The tourney men's finals will be conducted Sunday afternoon upon completion of Sunday morning's qualification rounds.

This event will annually be conducted during the spring of the bowling season. This season's tournament is being sponsored by Princess Lanes. Tournament activities will include:

Friday, April 10, 4 p.m., 6 p.m., 8 p.m., and 10 p.m.

Portsmouth Bowl

•Youth Bowlers Pro-Am competition.

ADULT PRO-AM COMPETITION

— $1000 1st place guaranteed.

For further information regarding the Pro-Am competition contact Mitchum Recreation Services at 424-7213.

The tournament attracted 69 entries and paid 10 places, with Johnson qualifying 1st with an 836 series; Bonnie Williams (not in picture) a 781 for 2nd place; and Lamb a 767 series in place 3rd.

Ladies "Lucky 8-Pin No Tap" Tournament is held once a month at Thunderbird Lanes. Jean has been conducting the tournament since February, 1986, (with 20 entries) when it was introduced, and in June, 1986, it became a monthly event attracting ladies from all over the Tidewater area. The event rapidly gained in popularity with the entries now averaging 60 per event.

"Lucky 8-Pin No Tap" means if the bowler knocks down eight or more pins with the first ball, she is credited with a strike, with all other scoring as normal.

Bowlers running the tournament, competing in six to seven leagues a week and bowling in local, city and state tournaments, Seifert always finds time to participate in charity fund-raising Bowls-a-thon and has been the leader in dollars collected for MDA, raising over $1600 in 1986 — and in the Arthur's Bowls-a-thon, raising over $1400 in 1986 and over $2200 in 1987.

A worthy effort for a very busy woman! Nice going, Jean!

VIRGINIA: In the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach on the 6th day of March, 1987

In Re: Benjamin Y. Ward, Deceased.

SHOW CAUSE ORDER AGAINST DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE

THIS DAY came James C. Ward and Esther B. Ward, Co-Executors of this Estate and filed with leave of Court a Motion for show Cause Order against distribution of this Estate.

It appearing to the Court that a report of the accounts of James C. Ward and Esther B. Ward, Co-Executors of the Estate of Benjamin Y. Ward, deceased, and of the debts and demands against the Estate has been filed in the Clerk's Office, and that six months have elapsed since the qualification, on motion of the Co-Executors, it is ORDERED that the creditors of, and all other persons interested in this Estate show cause, if any they can, on the 10th day of April, 1987, at 10:00 a.m., before this Court at its courtroom, against the payment and delivery of the estate to the parties entitled thereto, with or without requiring refunding bond as this Court may determine.

It is further ORDERED that a duly certified copy thereof be published once a week for two successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper of general circulation in this jurisdiction.

Brickell receives AASA's highest award

Virginia Beach Public Schools Superintendent Dr. E.E. Brickell has won 1987's highest award bestowed by the American Association of School Administrators (AASA). He received the Leadership for Learning Award recently at the national convention of AASA in New Orleans.

AASA is a national professional organizational for school superintendents and top-level school division administrators with a membership of 18,000. Each year, AASA seeks nominations for the Leadership for Learning Award from its membership.

Several dozen top administrators throughout the United States were nominated for the sixth annual award, according to Herman R. Goldberg, AASA Senior Executive Administrator. The names and accomplishments of eight finalists were submitted to a four-member jury which chose Brickell as the winner.

Brickell was nominated by the Virginia Association of School Administrators (VASA), of which is a past president. Thomas Trullit, current VASA president, said in his nomination, "Edward Brickell clearly demonstrates key qualities of an effective school leader—having a sense of mission and vision, maintaining open lines of two-way communication, and sustaining far-reaching political relationships."

Brickell was cited for his continuing leadership in the comprehensive Curriculum Assessment and Development project, as well as for implementation of recommendations which grew out of that project. In particular, the improvement in standardized test scores and increased student participation and performance in both advanced placement and vocational offerings were singled out for commendation.

Goldberg said that the most rigid criterion is that the successful candidate will have involved himself in a very significant way throughout a program or a project that led to improved student academic achievement.

"Dr. Brickell's long record and his vision and understanding of the curriculum, and the fact that he is called upon to help many groups in other school systems—all that led the jury to select him," said Goldberg.

Virginia Beach School Board member Dr. Ulysses V. Spiva accepted a $2,000 check in New Orleans from AASA to the school system as part of Brickell's award. He presented that check to the Board at a recent meeting.

Spiva told the approximately 1,000 persons at the awards banquet he was extremely pleased that such an honor has come to the Virginia Beach school system. "I am grateful we have been able to keep Dr. Brickell for so long," Spiva said. "It is his leadership and service that has brought us to this moment of honor."

Brickell received a Triton Steuben Glass sculpture and was recognized at the AASA awards banquet on the opening evening of the convention at the New Orleans Convention Center.

"I am proud and honored," said Brickell. "I believe the award is further evidence of the national leadership position achieved by our Virginia Beach public schools."

Beach resident takes part in Lehigh University trip

Derek S. Jensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Werner H. Jensen of 929 Duke of Suffolk Drive, recently visited an AT&T construction site in conjunction with the Lehigh University student chapter of the Society of American Military Engineers (SAME), a club affiliated with the Lehigh Army ROTC.

Jensen is also president of the German House on Lehigh's campus and the Lehigh Color Guard. He will be commissioned in May and serve in the U.S. Army Chemical Corps.

VWC class of '77 plans reunion

Alumni interested in assisting with plans or helping to locate class members are encouraged to contact the Alumni Office at Virginia Wesleyan College, 461-3322.

Michele Marino Brooks and Debbie Williams Llewellyn are serving as co-chairs of the reunion committee.

Lecture series on "Adolescence in Literature" offered at Oceanfront Area Library in April/May

The Friends of the Virginia Beach Public Library and the Department of English, Hampton University, will present a lecture/discussion series on "Adolescence in Literature: The Universal Experience" at the Oceanfront Area Library.

Dr. Clayton Holloway will speak on the book "Brown Girl, Brownstones," by Paula Marshall on Thursday, April 2; Dr. John Alewyn will speak on "The Great Sentinel," by Pat Conroy on Thursday, April 16; Margaret Bristow will speak on "Members of the Wedding," by Carson McCullers on Thursday, April 30; and Dr. Dorothea Mosley will speak on "The Learning Tree," by Gordon Parks on Thursday, May 14. All four programs will start at 7:30 p.m.

This series is funded in part by a grant from the Arts and Humanities Commission, city of Virginia Beach.

F.C.H.S.'s Amy Prociase is delegate for simulated constitutional convention

Amy Prociase of Virginia Beach, a student at First Colonial High School, will participate as a delegate in a simulated constitutional convention at the Capitol in Colonial Williamsburg March 19-22, organized by the Institute of Bill of Rights Law at the College of William and Mary's Marshall-Wythe School of Law.

Prociase will join 51 other Virginia high school students who debate the merits of a central government, form political coalitions, and perhaps draft their own constitutional document during the event.

The convention is designed to provide a forum for student research and debate on constitutional issues. Co-sponsors of the convention are the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, Williamsburg-James City County Public Schools, and the Virginia Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

In 1939, Louise O. Greene was helping a local Boy Scouts of America troop on a field trip to the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth. There, she saw her first Girl Scout and quickly found out how she could organize a group where she lived in Seateack.

"It was the first black instructor in the area," she said. It took a while to make all the necessary contacts but her volunteer work with the Girl Scouts started going strong in 1940.

Though that was almost 50 years ago, she still remembers many of the names of girls, now women, who took part in the numerous troops she has been involved with over the years.

One of the first persons she got to help her was her sister, Gracie M. Mitchell. Now 60-years-old, Mitchell was only 17 when she got involved as a troop leader. "I was helping in one and the leader over; been a scout leader ever since."

In the Bow Creek section of the city, Peggy Rough has been involved in the Girl Scouts over 44 years.

"I was a scout in Maryland in 1936 when I first started," she said.

Controversy over "double school"

School Board asks City Council for reallocation of $6.17 million

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A proposal by the School Board has unleashed a controversy concerning neighborhood schools as opposed to double schools for elementary school children.

E. Carlton Bowyer, assistant superintendent for operational services, Monday afternoon on behalf of the School Board, asked City Council to designate the $6.17 million allocated to the Ocean Lakes Elementary School to a double school in the Red Mill Farm Area to serve students who originally were to be assigned to two schools.

According to Bowyer, the double school would have the capacity for 1,500 to 1,600 students compared to the 900 capacity each anticipated for the

"I would hate to see us rushing into action...If we're going to purchase more land anyway, why not purchase it there (in Ocean Lakes)?" — Councilwoman Barbara Henley.

Red Mill Farm and Ocean Lakes school school which it would replace.

If the city decides to go along with the School Board, it will have to initiate validation proceedings with the Circuit Court to legally transfer the funds from one project to another because the 1986 referendum documents stated specifically that the funds would be going to Ocean Lakes.

The School Board is constructing two other double schools, Glenwood and Birdneck elementary schools, but Council members expressed skepticism on the desirability of housing young children in such a large facility.

The problem goes back to the rezoning of the Ocean Lakes property for the development by R.G. Moore Building Corporation.

Two school sites were reserved for schools, one for an elementary school and one for a high school. The School Board subsequently decided it would not accept the smaller, 25-acre site for any purpose. As for the 43-acre site, Bowyer said that with additional land it may eventually be appropriate for a high school, which is not needed until 1992.

Midwives

More than "catching babies"

By James D. Barr
Staff Writer

In the last two years, the City of Virginia Beach's Vital Statistics Office recorded 6,345 babies born in the city. While most of them were birthed in the various hospitals or other related facilities, a growing number are entering the world outside the maternity wards.

Two local women, Laurie MacPherson-Smith and C. Anne Retz, are certified nurse midwives who practice through Childbirth Services in Virginia Beach. They offer expectant couples another birthing option: homebirth.

People who consider trying homebirth without assistance, said MacPherson-Smith, should be careful.

"It would be very foolish to do it without proper training," she said.

MacPherson-Smith said that both women keep up to date with their skills. "A baby who needs help, needs it right away," she said.

Though both women have gone through extensive training to earn the title of Certified Nurse Midwife, (C.N.M.), they still have to battle some old misconceptions.

Most people hear the word "midwife" and think of the old fashion homebirth, said Retz. But across the nation, she said, less than one percent of the C.N.M.'s perform homebirths.

Another problem is the loose use of the term "midwife."

The difference between a "lay midwife" and a "certified nurse midwife" is mostly in the amount of training.

A lay midwife, said Retz, is someone who has gone through a short training course. A certified nurse midwife goes through an accredited school and finishes with a master's degree. It's a "big difference," said Retz.

Retz's training began in college when she obtained a B.S. in nursing at the University of New Mexico. After that she was a labor and delivery nurse at Virginia Beach General Hospital and later, while up in the Washington, D.C. area, was encouraged by some friends to apply to the University of Georgetown's School of Nursing and Midwifery.

In 1980, after her two years of schooling were over, she opened her practice in Virginia Beach. Her training, she said, was invaluable.

"It helped me grow in an understanding of the obstetrical process," she said. "It's more than 'catching babies'."

MacPherson-Smith did her training in Aberdeen, Scotland. Starting in 1971, she was in a five year program which included three years at Forresterhill College in registered general nursing and two years of on-the-job training.

She said they called it the "earn as you learn" program.

From there she went to the Northwest Territories of Canada for nine months at a small settlement called Fort Good Hope, where she was the health care provider for the local population.

After getting married and moving to Huntington, West Virginia, she didn't practice her midwifery skills for three years while her husband went through his medical school internship. When he completed that, she went through a three month refresher program in midwifery at Booth Maternity Hospital in Philadelphia.

After she and her husband looked around the country as to where they would want to start their practices, they chose Virginia Beach.

MacPherson-Smith thought it would be easy to start in this area considering how few certified

City Council discusses redevelopment of Dome

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The city is soliciting proposals for a comprehensive Redevelopment Strategy and Plan (RSP) for the Virginia Beach Civic Center (Dome) area.

The Resort Area Advisory Committee (RAAC) which recommended the comprehensive approach drew criticism from Councilwoman Reba McClanahan Monday afternoon for "Getting entirely too involved."

She said she had "never envisioned them coming in and telling us what to do." She said it was confusing to her. "In every point that comes up," she said, "if it is not what they want it's not a good idea. I'm not of an opinion we should be subsidizing developers."

She said that she was not opposed to the RAAC plan but that it would take a lot of time. She said she also would have a problem with postponing the use of the Dome for a year as proposed by RAAC.

It wouldn't hurt, however, she said, to proceed with finding out what the final plan would be.

Councilman Robert Fentress noted that RAAC "seems to be taking a hit."

He pointed out that Council asked RAAC for its opinion. "They're talking about a design competition and leaving it open. We're not committing to anything," he said.

During the discussion at a work session preceding the regular Council meeting, Council decided by consensus to go ahead with soliciting proposals for the RSP.

Council last October had asked RAAC to comment on a proposal by a city staff task force to lease the Dome. The staff had determined that the 29-year old rental facility was not being used to the fullest because of infrastructure deficiencies.

The cost for upgrading the Dome is estimated at $1.2 million which is not funded in the current or proposed city budgets, City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said.

The appraised value of the property alone is $2,590,000.

The staff presented Council with four options, including the one which was recommended by RAAC. That option requires that the Dome not be leased but continue to serve its current clients for an additional year while at the same time, plans should be developed for the aggregation of city properties in the area that would ultimately allow for incorporating antiquated municipal buildings into the redevelopment of a major public gathering space which could include a park, restaurant and retail sector.

The Council made it clear that by soliciting proposals it was not committing itself to anything.

RAAC based its recommendation on the premise that the future potential rests not with the Dome itself but with the Virginia Beach Arts Center offers ceramic exhibition

The Virginia Beach Arts Center is presenting an exhibition of ceramic works from the Lill Street Studios in Chicago until April 26.

The exhibition is co-sponsored in Virginia by the 1708 East Main alternative space gallery in Richmond.

Visually the pieces are characterized by brash angularity, edged figure narratives, and a provocatively urban feeling of immediacy.

Such imagery is being seen worldwide with the advent of neo-expressionistic and transavant-gardian movements in the 1980's.

It is unique to Chicago that the forms have a long tradition; and works in museums by the Chicago Imagist "Heiry Who" group have pre-dated current fashionable movements.

The Lill Street Studios exhibition gives a rare chance to view the tradition in clay.

VBAC hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday. For further information call 425-0000.

Revised access rules proposed for Back Bay Wildlife Refuge

Revised regulations concerning public access, use, and recreation on the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge in Virginia have been published in the Federal Register, Refuge Manager Anthony Leger recently announced.

The proposed regulations by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service include rules for vehicular access as well as general recreational uses. Interested persons may submit written comments through April 20 to the Regional Director, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (ARW), One Gateway Center, Suite 700, Newton Corner, Mass. 02158.

The proposed rules would replace those in effect since 1983. Regulations on public use and recreation remain unchanged.

Changes and redefinitions for motor vehicle access permit holders include:

- Access permits for medical reasons;
- 24-hour a day access from Oct. 1 through April 30;
- Commercial service vehicles on business calls;
- Access privileges for certain business purposes;
- Prohibitions on transporting individuals for hire or prospective real estate clients.

A copy of the proposed rule is available for public review at the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, 4005 Sandpiper Road, Virginia Beach, Va. 23456, or by writing the Regional Director in Newton Corner, Mass.

All relevant comments will be considered prior to issuance of a final rule.

Miss America

Home and heart

Virginia Beach residents can be proud to say that this year's Miss America, Kellye Cash, is a citizen of our city. As world ambassador she speaks and performs in front of hundreds and thousands of people every week.

While the title and all that goes with it seems glamorous, the non-stop schedule, the travel, the many interviews and the constant attention can at times be draining.

Even when she came "home" to Virginia Beach there were press conferences, phone interviews, the City Council meeting, fund raising events, and somehow squeezed in, time for family, friends and also to get away from it all.

In the midst of all of this activity, anyone who has spent the smallest amount of time with Kellye will tell you that she has the knack of making you feel like your interview or your activity is the most important meeting that day. Her honest and compassion come across as she fulfills her responsibility as Miss America.

You might think that her efforts are just a front, part of the image that she "puts on" when she is in the limelight. Superwoman she is not, and surely there are times when the routine gets wearisome, but there is something about Kellye Cash that speaks of sincerity. In her words and her actions the genuineness comes through.

Bright, talented and educated, Kellye Cash has visited all around the country. In every city and town she is given the red carpet treatment. But Virginia Beach is the only place she calls "home."

Education

Changing of the guard

The recent city school board announcement of Dr. James E. Melvin as successor to Dr. E. E. Brickell as superintendent of the Virginia Beach school system was greeted with the usual excitement and anticipation which accompanies a change of that magnitude. There was also the sense of appreciation for what Brickell's tenure has done for the city.

Having served as Virginia Beach's superintendent of schools for the past 18 years, his leadership has lasted through the city's tremendous growth and the many accompanying policy decisions. As Dr. Brickell prepares to step down his many colleagues give him much of the credit for what the city's school system has become.

If the city's school system at the beginning of Brickell's tenure could be compared to an infant child, he is now handing over to Dr. Melvin a gangly teenager, still growing, full of potential and a bit unpredictable. The challenges and the opportunities are before Dr. Melvin.

But Dr. Melvin does not come without ample qualifications. Along with his over-25 years of experience in the field of education and his excellent educational background, his present position as superintendent of schools in Fort Myers, Fla., has offered him an opportunity to operate in a school system that closely resembles that of Virginia Beach.

Its fast growth, sea-side resort community atmosphere offered a taste of what the Virginia Beach school system is going through. His three years of experience there should afford him a good "stepping-stone" to his responsibilities here in Virginia Beach.

The efforts of Dr. Brickell have created a strong foundation on which to build. The community looks forward to see what kind of leadership Dr. Melvin will give to the city's educational community. — J.D.B.

Digging up yesteryear

With the recent archeological finds in Portsmouth and work being done at the Old Ferry Plantation in Virginia Beach, my mind races back to my first and only real experience in archeology.

When I was in the tenth grade, too young to know what I was doing, I took a course from what I remember to be a very tough teacher.

I can't remember the name of the course nor do I recall the teacher's name. But I do remember a field trip we took.

Within a half hour's drive from our school was a large reservoir. Built in the 1930s as a Public Works project during the Depression, this reservoir forced a number of small towns to be evacuated. Within a short time, everything in them was relocated and all that remained were the foundations of the buildings and the deteriorating streets and roads.

On this field trip we drove to the center of one "ghost town," and were told our assignment: by careful examination we were to determine what each building was when the town was still alive.

We were given some clues but it was our job to identify, through the shape of the foundations, any artifacts we found, its position in relation to other buildings and other features, whether a building may have been a hotel, bank, private dwelling, store or post office. I thought it was a great challenge.

That warm spring day was one of discovery. In the midst of the quiet surrounding I can remember hearing the shouts of fellow students when a new fact was uncovered. Old bottles were found here and there. Decaying articles were turned up. One student even found a 1919 penny, possibly lost by one of the town's long-gone residents, sitting untouched for decades.

My partner and I focused our attention on one building we thought looked interesting. Actually we focused on what was left of the building, but my youthful imagination soon reconstructed what it might have looked like.

From what I remember, the building was located at the southeast corner of the town's common. The foundation was basically square with a small section extending from the back.

Our biggest piece of evidence was a large floor safe that sat rusting in what was the basement. We surmised the owners left it because of its sheer weight.

What it told us was that this building was probably not a private dwelling but a business that needed a safe for its daily activity.

Another clue that pointed us in the same direction were the numerous stone hitching posts located in the front near the street. In pre-automobile day, this would allow customers to "park" their horses.

At the end of the day, some of it I must confess spent just enjoying the sun and the fresh air, we concluded and defended that this building was a hotel.

It all fit. All our facts pointed to it. We were wrong.

From old records our teacher showed us the old town map. Our building was a small store which doubled as the local post office. Our facts, we saw, pointed to this too.

Like I said earlier, there is not much else about the course that I can remember. That field trip is all that is left. But it is a good memory and whenever I think of archeology I think of that little deserted town.

Just a chat . . . with Kellye Cash

Occupation: Miss America

Resides in: Virginia Beach

Age: 22

If I didn't have this job I would be: Back in school at Memphis State University as a communications major involved in various activities.

By biggest accomplishment was: Miss America, so far. I hope to be a successful broadcaster someday.

What I really love about my job is: The people, they really make it enjoyable.

What I really dislike about my job is: The packing and traveling, especially the packing.

The last thing I messed up on was: I forgot the words of a song in the middle of a performance in Oklahoma. I stopped, the audience laughed, and I started all over again.

If I got a million dollars tomorrow I'd: Invest it and talk to my tax attorney.

The most recent book I read was: Oh no! I have not read anything since becoming Miss America.

My favorite TV show is: Family Ties, I really want to meet Michael J. Fox.

My favorite movie is: Out of Africa, I saw it just before I became Miss Tennessee.

My favorite musician is: Russian pianist Sergei Rachmaninoff, pop musician Billy Joel and contemporary Christian artists Sandy Patti and Lionel Harris.

What most people don't know about me is: My hopes to be a classical pianist were almost crushed when I broke four fingers in high school. What I like about Virginia Beach is: It is my favorite city. I love the seasons, the beach, its history and especially the support it gives to military families.

My favorite childhood memory is: Seeing my Dad after he came home from Vietnam after 13 months.

My favorite seafood dish is: I love scallops but of all foods I love a beef burrito and I could eat Recess peanut butter cups all day long.

4-H coordinator appreciates coverage

Editor:

Recently, I read your article: "Community newspapers win with fresh 'hometown' news." As 4-H Coordinator and Extension Agent for the Virginia Beach 4-H programs I must commend your paper for being so community oriented.

Let me especially add that the recent coverage on 4-H in Virginia Beach has been outstanding! The editorial entitled "4-H and the Community," in the February 25, 1987 edition is one of the best tributes to 4-H educational programs that I have ever read. Staff writer, James D. Barr, is to be commended for his accurate, creative and innovative journalism.

It is such coverage as this that validates your paper's uniqueness of being community oriented.

Thanks again for the outstanding coverage and promotion of the 4-H program in the City of Virginia Beach. The Virginia

Be aware of your constitutional rights

Editor:

If a politician, official, or an individual tries to take a constitutional right from an American, this right is being taken from all Americans.

We should cherish the fact that we are citizens of the United States, and have the same rights, immunities, and responsibilities of all other citizens.

We have to be alert and fight to keep these constitutional rights.

There is the freedom to gather peaceably to petition for the correction of justice.

Also, there are the freedoms for the protection of our privacy and our homes.

Op-Ed

Many expectations for superintendent

The new superintendent of schools means a lot of things to a lot of people.

•Cynics might say to get a good contract with the school board.

•Efficiency experts might say to automate the entire operation.

•Sports fans might say to place more emphasis on athletics and the arts community might say that we need more culture for the masses.

•Old timers might say, "Cool your heels sonny and look around for a while. Your first priority should be to get to know

Education

Let's Talk

By

Rob Jones, president

Virginia Beach Education Association

us."

•Classroom teachers might say lower class size, it really does make a difference.

•And, the kids might say to make my teacher give me an A+ and no school on Fridays.

The more you think about what the next superintendent's priorities should be, the more you realize that he will be expected to be everything to everybody. That is the nature of the job.

With all the tugging and pulling going on from the diverse interests in our community, maybe the superintendent's first priority should be to keep in top physical and mental shape. If he does not, "we" will wear him down to ineffectiveness in no time.

But wait a minute, maybe Virginia Beach is a great place for a new superintendent to do great things. The community, overall, has a good future. The corps of teachers is exceptional. Only a few building administrators are ineffective and that can be fixed.

Curriculum development and staff development has good potential. Achievement levels of students seem to match their ability. The voters have supported the building of new schools.

The school board and city council have not blindly cut school budgets over the years. The business community understands the need for good schools and supports the school system.

In fact, after looking at all the tugging and pulling from the diverse interests in our community, the new superintendent is bound to succeed.

Everyone involved wants the new superintendent to succeed because we want a great school system. The next few years should prove to be exciting times in our Virginia Beach schools.

Watch us, better yet — help us, become a part of the learning revolution preparing for the 21st century.

Spring cleaning safety tips

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Now that Spring is right around the corner, the residents of Virginia Beach will be planning their list of jobs to do around the house.

When you are preparing this list, please consider these safety tips so that you can enjoy yourself after the work is completed.

Take a look at your step ladder. If it is a wooden one and has some age on it, replace it with an aluminum step ladder. The aluminum ladders are stronger and sturdier. Never use the top step to work off of.

look for overhead electrical wires. Stay away from them.

If you are going to paint, do not use gasoline to clean your paint brushes. Gasoline is too volatile and the vapors are invisible. Use only approved paint thinner to clean your brushes.

Have your lawn mower blade sharpened and change the oil. Never refill the gas tank when the engine is hot.

Your Virginia Beach professional firefighters will be doing their own Spring cleaning. We have all of our fire hose to test and every fire hydrant in the city of Virginia Beach will be inspected.

Come by any fire station in Virginia Beach and ask for a pamphlet on fire safety. Also ask for a free 911 sticker for your telephone.

Test your smoke detector and think fire safety.

Economic Development

New and expanding companies invest $215 million

By Hugh D. Keogh

President Forward Hampton Roads

A record $215,590,200 in capital investment by 79 new and expanding industrial companies and general warehouse construction in Hampton Roads is reported for 1986 by Forward Hampton Roads, the economic development arm of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

That dollar figure represents a 231 percent increase over the 1985 reported investment. New jobs created by the 1986 industrial activity was 2,168, a modest but steady 7 percent increase over 1985 employment projections.

The report of announcements of new jobs, capital improvement and new industrial space, was compiled from published reports and telephone interviews conducted by the Research Department of FHR with cooperation from the Economic Development Departments of the cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, Suffolk and Virginia Beach.

The report does not include projects by public utilities, government or general office operations, retail or commercial activities. Although the report is not all inclusive, it does represent the most comprehensive information of new industrial activity available for Hampton Roads.

The most capital intensive investment among the 20 new industrial companies locating in Hampton Roads was the $80,000,000 energy cogeneration project in Portsmouth by Cogentrix of Virginia, Incorporated.

Nine of the newly established companies are manufacturers providing 174 of the 372 new jobs projected by new industrial firms.

Expansion projects by existing industries accounted for 1,796 new jobs in 1986, primarily in the marine industry. Norshipco added 700 jobs, Colonna's Shipyard added 175 jobs and CDI Marine Company added 125. Seacor, a defense contractor providing engineering services for Navy ships, hired 212 new personnel.

The most significant capital investment among the 59 expanding industries comes from a new production unit, installed assets plus future plans that could result in a $50,000,000 investment by Virginia Chemicals in a joint venture with Sanyo Chemicals Industries of Japan to produce a super absorbent polymer, according to company officials based in Portsmouth.

Motor Convoy invested $10,000,000 in a new truck terminal operation in Norfolk. Upgraded facilities and new equipment in the ship repair industrial accounted for investments of $9,000,000, $4,500,000 and $3,500,000 by Colonna's Shipyard, Norshipco and Metro Machine Corporation, respectively.

Start-up construction of seven new general warehouse facilities, expanded industrial space by existing industries and newly occupied space by new company locations totalled 1.8 million square feet in 1986, a 130 percent increase over 1985.

Industrial activity in Hampton Roads in 1986 indicates that the region continues to be attractive to a wide range of corporate decision makers. The high level of expansions by existing companies represents a strong endorsement of the local business climate in our five cities as well.

While the outlook for 1986 is mixed, primarily due to changes in the Federal tax laws, the January announcement by Hills Bros. Coffee, Inc. to locate a coffee production facility in Suffolk gets the year off to an excellent start.

Ricky Rudd won last year

Martinsville NASCAR race offering $364,880 in awards

Virginia Beach, Chesapeake and Portsmouth racing fans are invited to the Martinsville Speedway on Sunday, April 26 for the "world's richest short track race," according to a press release.

Awards for the 32nd Annual Sovran Bank NASCAR Winston Cup Series total $364,880 for the 500-lap race that covers 263 miles over the .526-mile track. The awards are the richest in the track's history, the release says.

H. Clay Earles, speedway president, said that the prize money totaled only $335,480 last year.

"Winston Cup racing is the fastest growing sport in America and Martinsville Speedway will continue to grow with it," Earles said.

The winner will receive a base purse of $29,000 with $16,500 for second and $11,225 for third. With qualifying, lap awards and the various NASCAR driver plans, paid by the speedway, all finish positions in the 30-car starting field will be greatly increased.

last year's Sovran Bank 500.

That record very likely will be rewritten.

Time trials on Thursday and Friday will decide the starting field while Saturday will be devoted to practice and the running of the $28,865 Performance Pontiac 150, a 150-lap NASCAR Winston Modified Tour race at 2 p.m.

Participating manufacturers in the Sovran Bank 500 include Winston cigarettes, Unocal gasoline, Bilstein shock absorbers, Champion spark plugs, Crane cams, Edelbrock intake manifolds, Goodyear automotive belts, Holley carburetors, Monroe shock absorbers, MOOG chassis parts, Peak anti-freeze and coolant, Sears DieHard batteries, Simpson helmets, Speed-Pro piston rings, Stant radiator caps, STP oil treatment and filters, Busch beer, Turbo Sales and Service, True Value Hardware, Stokely Van Camp, Ingersoll-Rand professional tools, McCord gaskets, Gatorade, Michigan engine bearings, BRC crankshafts, Earl's competition plumbing, Howard Stewart instruments, JE pistons, Perfect Circle valve stem seals, Victor oil seals, TRW, Wisco pistons, Auto Meter instruments, Goody's headache powders and tablets, Motorsports Designs and Morosco oil pans.

The Sovran Bank 500 will get the green flag at 12:30 p.m. and will be broadcast by the Motor Racing Network and taped for delayed television showing by the Special Events

Competition tight at Langley Speedway Season Opener

Racing Around
C. L. Hildebrandt

By C. L. Hildebrandt

Last weekend, Langley Speedway opened the 1987 racing season with the Charlie Falk 100 lap for late model stock cars. This marked the first event in the area for the local drivers.

The long winter layoff allowed many teams to burn the midnight oil. They brought quite a few good looking cars to the track.

The All American class saw Robert Dozier win his first race of the 87 season. This class shows a lot of hard work during the months.

In the Grand Stock class, I was surprised at the changes that took place over the winter. Many teams were sporting new cars looking a lot like Grand National (Sportsman) cars.

The class shows a lot of the traditional excitement and will prove to be one to watch. In the thirty lap event, Buddy Dozier won his event, making it two wins for the Dozier family.

The late models were last on the card with the Charlie Falk 100. Four of the top five starters were from Chesapeake. Sawyer, Adams, and Hudson all started from the top two rows.

As the green flew, Roger Sawyer took a commanding lead that was never seriously challenged. As the race moved to its halfway point, Bubba Adams seemed to be struggling with the new RC cola Firebird. Adams eventually muscled his way to a second finishing spot, he kept the rest of the field behind him, and let Sawyer cruise to a 3.80 margin of victory.

This year, it seems that there is more drivers moving into the fast class. It won't be easy for some. Chip Hudson and Roger Sawyer are expected to be consistent this year.

The competition will be tight for the Mid-Atlantic as well as the Langley points race. Instead of one or two drivers making the trip into victory lane, I can see many more sharing in the victory laurels. For me, this will be more enjoyable.

Random thoughts
Since Langley Speedway was closed on account of the Martinsville race, many teams will use this breather for a little catch-up. With the competition being tight, these breaks will be few and far between.

John Ramey has a new mount this year. John is driving a new Camaro with Advance Auto Parts as his main sponsor. John suffered engine problems and didn't complete the feature.

T. T. Brinn competed in the All American class race Sunday, his engine for his late model is not ready yet. TT is driving the Chip Hudson back-up car from last year. No word as to when they are planning to bring out the car.

That's about all for this week. I hope to see you all back at Langley Speedway next Sunday afternoon. Until then, I'll be racing around.

Pit Notes

I visited Chip Hudson's garage last week. His new car is ready for the Langley opener. The sharp red and white Firebird will catch a lot of eyes this year. Chip is hoping for many repeat appearances in victory land this year.

This year I bought a new toy to take along to the races. Last year, a few of the people had portable scanners along, to listen to NASCAR and their favorite driver talk back and forth over the radio. This year was my year to try it.

After Stock Car Racing magazine published all of the radio frequencies, I preprogrammed the channels and went to the races. Sunday I turned on the radio, and nothing. I heard NASCAR talking, but that's about all.

I asked Ricky Rudd's crew for the number. They told me that as soon as they found the number I was more than welcome to it. Other teams gave me the impression that I was better off asking for the combination to Fort Knox.

Even the local drivers were a bit hesitant to give me frequency numbers. But, I had a good time listening to NASCAR run the race. At least I found out who was a lap down and so forth.

As the season progresses I hope to be able to listen to all of the drivers and find out what really goes on out on the track.

That's it for this week. I hope to see you all at Langley Speedway for the opener. Until then I'll be racing around.

Elliott Optimistic about Grand National

Bill Elliott, of Dawsonville, Ga., who scored the largest single event payday in Winston Cup stock car racing history when he won the 1985 Southern 500 and with it, the Winston Million bonus, will be trying to conquer new territory at the 1.366-mile oval on March 28.

Elliott has filed an entry for the Country Square Homes 200 NASCAR Busch Grand National Series race that precedes the March 29 TransSouth 500 Winston Cup race. It is the first time that Elliott, who has run 18 Winston Cup races at Darlington, will run a Grand National car here.

"I've always run well at Darlington, so I'm looking forward to a chance to run another race there," said Elliott, who will drive Coors/Melling Ford Thunderbird entered by BSR Products that looks identical to the car he used to win the '85 Southern 500. "When NASCAR made the '86 Thunderbird legal for Grand National racing, we made plans to run a handful of races and, after what happened at Daytona, I'd like to see us make a better effort."

Elliott made the fourth Grand National start of his career in the Goody's 300 during Speed Weeks. His day came to an end when Elliott crashed the car late in the race.

"The car's being painted right now," reported owner Butch Stevens from his Charlotte, N.C., shop. "We had to replace everything from the back window on back, including the frame."

The car was due to make an appearance March 14-15 at Sylvania Lake Dord, an Atlanta dealership which helps sponsor the team.

The difference between the Thunderbird Elliott ran in '85 and the Grand National car include the GN car's shorter wheelbase (105" as opposed to 110") and its number—89, not Elliott's familiar 9.

"We hope to be able to test before the race at Darlington," said Stevens. "For the first time out of the box at Daytona, me and Ernie (Elliott) both were pretty pleased."

"The engine was the first 302 (cubic inch) Ernie's done in 11 years and the race car was the first one I'd put together since 1972. We're a little rusty, but we're heading in the right direction."

Stevens said the team hopes to have a V6 engine in the car, possibly by the Gatorade 200 at Darlington on Sept. 5.

"That's the idea we had when we built this car," said Stevens, whose operation is totally independent of the Elliott's, with the exception of Ernie's engine building. "With the larger carburetors the V6s are allowed, we're a little handicapped (with a V8), but we'll keep on plugging."

Girl Scouts for life

sashes, they have many, many good memories.

Green's motivation was simple. "I wanted to work with young people to keep them out of trouble," she said.

Over the years she couldn't always keep up with the kids all the time, she said, but it "kept me young."

In the city's Seatack area, Greene said she helped organize the Girl Scouts at every level. But her efforts reached beyond there. She also worked with getting things started in the Back Bay area, around what was known as Nimmo and in Piney Grove.

Along with all the names she remembers are the many activities she took part in.

"I told everyone I was out fishing and I never saw anyone. I never was out, but I told them that to keep them calm." — Gracie M. Mitchell, describing a scary experience as a Girl Scout leader.

There were the many trips to see ships, hiking, swimming, cleaning up Fort Story, helping plant grass at Sandbridge, but in all of it she can't remember ever having any of her troops getting hurt.

"We always kept an eye on them," said Greene.

One incident she particularly remembers happened back in 1947 when she took a carful of girls on a camping trip. Greene said along with the nine or ten girls was all the food, camping equipment, stoves and packs. With so much loading down her 1939 station wagon, she was pulled over by a policeman who saw her driving by.

Once he saw what they were doing, she said, he let them off without a ticket.

Mitchell went on many of the same camping trips and that is what her favorite memories are connected with — "the fire, the cooking, the 'taps' in the morning, everything," she said.

One time, while at Camp Young in Chesapeake, something or someone spooked the camp one morning.

"I told everyone I was out fishing and I never saw anyone," Mitchell said. "I never was out, but I told them that to keep them calm."

To this day she does not know what made the noise but she said, "I don't care to find out."

Through all the trips, rain storms, transporting all the equipment and roughing it, Mitchell said, "We were tough, had to be, but we had a good time."

While Greene and Mitchell started as leaders, Rough began as a scout. When she got to college she helped out, but marriage and motherhood interrupted at this point. Five years and five children later she decided to get back into scouting.

"I wanted to get out (of the house)," she said, "but I also wanted to do something worthwhile."

Since then the list of her activities in scouting is lengthy: Brownie leader, Intermediate leader, senior, junior and cadet leader, neighborhood chairman, service unit director, day camp director, program consultant, first aid, trainer of outdoor activities, and of course, cookie chairman. She said that many times she wore two or three of these hats at the same time.

In all of it, she said, "I learned to love the out-of-doors, conservation, nature, and I've tried to instill it in others."

More importantly, Rough said she liked knowing that she was doing something that will continue on after she leaves. "I have a lot of girls who are now leaders," she said, "dozens of them."

Now, working with her granddaughter's scout troop, she thinks she will keep involved with scouting as long as she can.

"I'll stay in it till I die probably," she said, "as a trainer, consultant or whatever."

nurse midwives she thought practice here. "On the contrary," she said, "I couldn't even get an interview." Finally, through the La Leche League of Tidewater, she heard of Retz's practice and got in touch with her.

Though Retz and MacPherson-Smith have differing personalities Retz said "the philosophy is the same." What they agree on is the attitude toward women in the child-bearing situation.

Though they do not prescribe controlled drugs and in that sense don't practice medicine, as C.N.M.'s they are able to work with women in all areas of normal women's health care.

Along with pre-natal and post-partum care, they administer certain medication and are trained, they said, to do minor surgical procedures, such as episiotomies and episiotomy repair. They also do the complete newborn assessment on the baby and counsel on family planning/contraceptive care.

Being in this line of work does sometimes call for crazy hours.

Babies are born all hours of the day and night. But when you see the new baby, said Retz, when the mother and father both assist in delivering and you see their faces, it is wonderful.

"Double School" creates controversy

But because of the site work needed and the involvement of the Environmental Protection Agency, the construction of an elementary school there, needed by next year, would be delayed. The property was originally the location of a pig farm.

Bowyer said that additional land is available in the Red Mill Farm area for $35,000 and acre.

If the schools start the project now, Bowyer said, the school can be completed in August.

Council decided to consider the resolution for the redesignation of the referendum funds next Monday. Representatives of the School Board also will be asked to attend a work session prior to the meeting.

"Have someone from the School Board here," Councilwoman Barbara Henley said. "That's how we got into this mess in 1983."

Henley was apparently referring to the rezoning of the property when the School Board voiced no objections.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan is inclined toward going along with the School Board request to avoid delays to the Red Mill project.

Bowyer, in answer to a question from Henley, said that the School Board has had no public hearing on the proposal to advise people who would be affected.

Henley said she wanted to know whether the residents want a neighborhood school or are comfortable with having a really large school. She said that if the larger school turns out not to be a good idea, the city would be left with a large building.

Next week Council is expected to schedule the 1987 bond sale for April 21. Included will be $4,435,000 of the $5,881,000 Red Mill School and $3,840,000 of the $6,170,000 Ocean Lakes School.

Councilman Albert Balko, who served on the schools' site selection committee, said that the Hampton Roads Sanitation District whose treatment plan adjoins the 43-acre site, is not amenable to selling property, but is amenable to trading properties.

The double school was the unanimous decision of the site selection committee which also did not recommend building any school on the 43-acre site. He said the double school would solve the problem.

He also said that the HRSD will be bidding soon on an odor abatement program which will make the 43-acre site more desirable.

Bowyer said that two schools — junior high school when needed and an elementary school — could not be built on the 43-acre site because of the drainage complications. Retention lakes will have to be built on two sides of the property.

Council discusses Dome

publically-owned land.

Timothy E. Barrow, RAAC chairman, in a letter to Council, said "the Dome" building "has exhausted its useful life and that the city must move promptly with aggressive redevelopment planning for the aggregated city properties in the area."

RAAC recommended that the Dome be used for the next year by the Economic Development Department as it has been in the past, and not leased.

Barrow said that the Dome does not have a viable role in the development of the properties on 19th Street but may be valuable elsewhere as a recreational structure.

RAAC recommended an immediate formation of a 19th

Street Planning task force drawn from municipal departments, the Planning Commission, RAAC and resort business and civic representatives. It said that a development design competition may be an integral part of the effort.

The RAAC calls for a development plan that incorporates the Dome block and the blocks surrounding it. Incorporated in the plan would be the needs or plans to replace the fire, rescue, tax, public health and/or other city facilities located there.

High on the list of uses recommended by RAAC are a major public gathering space or shaded park, or a restaurant district or a quality retail district.

Officials welcome Lillian Vernon Corp.

At the close of the recently held news conference announcing the relocation of Lillian Vernon Corp.'s distribution center and warehouse to Virginia Beach, Mrs. Lillian Vernon Katz joined Virginia Gov. Gerald L. Balles and A. James De Bellis, director of the Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development, next to rendering of the new facility.

Lillian Vernon Corp., the internationally known catalog company, will construct a 400,000-square-foot building on slightly more than 45 acres in Oceana West Industrial Park. Approximately 450 people will be employed at the complex, with an additional 250 to 300 hired during peak seasons.

Ground breaking is set for this spring and completion is due in the fall of 1988.

Oceana Industrial Center announces major renovations

The Oceana Industrial Center in Virginia Beach is getting a facelift and a new name.

According to The NewLife Group, Inc., McLean, Va., the new commercial office space facility will this May be renamed the Lynnhaven Business Centre.

Renovations for the Lynnhaven Business Centre, which was built in 1975, include a new facade to update the appearance of the 67,000-square-foot building.

Prospective tenants include area defense contractors, research and development firms, distributors of building supplies and light manufacturing companies, according to John M. Lee, of Goodman Segar Hogan, which is handling the leasing of the Lynnhaven Business Centre.

TBA council wins national recognition

The Sales and Marketing Council (SMC) of Tidewater Builders Association won an Award of Merit for Best Local Sales and Marketing Council in the nation during the recent National Association of Homebuilders (NAHB) annual convention held in Dallas.

"We are extremely proud to be recognized by such a prestigious organization," said Barbara Sachon, 1986 chairman of the local SMC. "This award is an incentive to maintain our approach in Tidewater."

The Cegg Partnership announces promotions

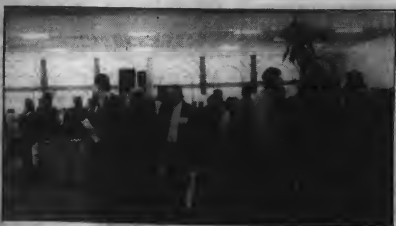

The Cegg Partnership, a Virginia Beach architectural, engineering, surveying firm, has announced that the following personnel have been promoted to design technicians:

Danilo M. Herrera, who is assigned to the firm's architectural department; Duane A. Morris, who is assigned to the firm's Cadd department; and Linwood C. Taylor, who is assigned to the firm's survey department.

Amidon named TBA's marketing director

Virginia Beach resident Sandra K. Amidon has been named director of public relations and marketing of Tidewater Builders Association (TBA). The announcement was made by Channing Pfeiffer, executive vice president of the organization.

Amidon is responsible for the overall operations of the marketing staff, including advertising, trade shows, public relations, internal communications, Homearama and Home Show and Builders Mart. She was previously sales and shows manager for TBA. She has been with the Association since 1973.

Ferebee named RPAC campaign chairman

The trustees of the Realtors Political Action Committee (RPAC) of Virginia have announced that Sandra W. Ferebee of Virginia Beach will be the 1987 statewide RPAC Campaign Chairman.

The political fundraising/campaign contribution arm of the Virginia Association of Realtors, RPAC of Virginia is presently the most successful political action committee in the state. It raised more than $325,000 in 1986.

Ferebee is a senior vice president and regional area manager for Goodman-Segar-Hogan Residential Sales Corporation. She was president of the 3,000-member Tidewater Board of Realtors in 1985.

She presently serves as a director of the Virginia Association of Realtors today and is chairman of the Convention Education and Awards Committee of the National Association of Realtors.

Giordano tub wins award

A tub built for Mr. and Mrs. Greg Giordano of Virginia Beach was one of 50 spas/tubs to win awards in the 1987 Spa/Tub Design Awards Competition sponsored by the National Spa and Pool Institute.

The tub and deck built by Great Atlantic Hot Tub Shoppes was selected for a Silver Design Award.

Cooling Out

The Virginia Association of Plumbers, Heating and Cooling Contractors recently held its 64th Plumbing, Heating and Contractor's Industry Product Exposition at the Cavalier ocean side. The event hosted 76 exhibitors and over 650 visitors.
